AUSTRIA WILL MOVE ALONE ON MONTENEGRO

Official Announcement of Decision to Force Evacuation of Scutari Is Made.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.
VIENNA, April 29.—Announcement was made at the Foreign Office today that Austria had decided finally to act independently in the expulsion of the Montenegrins from Scutari. The statement said:

Austria finding that the Ambassadors' conference in London has produced no results, this Government has decided to take matters into its own hands and carry out the powers' decision regarding the evacuation of Scutari.

Italy is protesting against Austria's action.

Peace Ambassadors Started.
LONDON, April 29.—After having adjourned until May 1, the Ambassadors' conference unexpectedly resumed its sessions in the Foreign Office this afternoon.

This procedure was brought about by Austria's announced determination to act independently in driving the Montenegrins out of Scutari.

Montenegro Starts To Fortify Scutari.

PARIS, April 29.—Montenegrins are determined to hold Scutari against any action that Europe may take. Work of fortifying the city has started. Guns, ammunition and provisions are being taken into the city. This information was received here today in a Scutari dispatch.

Although the bulk of the Montenegrin army has been withdrawn from Scutari, King Nicholas' military operations are veiled in mystery.

The diplomatic representative here of Montenegro declares that, if the powers force Montenegro to give up Scutari, King Nicholas will abdicate. The envoy denies Nicholas bargained with Eased Pasha for the surrender of Scutari.

A Cattaro telegram said that it was reported there that a hostile demonstration had been made in Cetinje against the Austrian Minister to Montenegro.

Porte Lends Support to Albanian Independence.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 29.—The Porte today sent instructions to all the Turkish ambassadors and ministers abroad to support Eased Pasha's proclamation of the independence of Albania with himself as King.

According to the belief here, Eased Pasha hoped he might be able to retain the suzerainty of Turkey over Albania by setting himself up as monarch. Turkey also is taking hope from rumors of dissension among the allies.

Bulgarian troops are said to have been repulsed in several sanguinary engagements with Servians near Monastir and with Greeks near Salonika. Turkey has protested to the powers against the aid given the Balkan States by Russia.

Montenegro to Abandon Scutari, Says Diplomat.

VIENNA, April 29.—According to secret information to Austria, it was learned from a diplomatic source today, Montenegro will eventually evacuate Scutari, after having made a further show of defiance to Europe.

A Cetinje dispatch declares Crown Prince Danilo yesterday presented the keys of Scutari to King Nicholas there amid a frenzied demonstration.

Fire Probe Delayed Again for Witness

Mysterious Reynolds Wires Mayor He Can Not Reach Atlanta Before Thursday.

Council's committee probing the fire department has postponed its meeting for today until Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock on account of the absence of Thomas Reynolds, the mysterious witness from Baltimore, whom Mayor Woodward expects will present some important new evidence.

Martin in England, His Family's Theory

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.
LONDON, April 29.—Fresh developments are expected in the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Joseph W. Martin, of Memphis, Tenn., as the result of an advertisement in The London Times today.

This ad, which appeared in the "personal column," said that it is of the utmost importance that Mr. Martin communicate with his brother. The insertion of the ad in a London newspaper would indicate that Martin's family believes Mr. Martin is still in England and that he is voluntarily hiding.

Your Name There?

Don't be discouraged if your name has not appeared among the lucky ones who receive a dollar. Yours may be in to-day's Georgian. It will pay you to read the "Want Ad" section.

DETAILS OF BIG PONY CONTEST ANNOUNCED

There Is Every Reason for Starting Now if You Wish To Be One of the Winners.

Details of the contests for the Shetland ponies The Georgian and Sunday American are to award prizes have been announced.

Many nominations preceded the announcement of details. Since publication of the details in The Georgian Monday there has been a veritable flood of entrants.

What wonder? The contest entails the most pleasant kind of work and the prizes are an incentive to any boy or girl.

Anyone seeking subscriptions for The Georgian and Sunday American, we believe, will be received kindly in any Georgia home, and any contestant may be proud of the ponies and carts which are on the way here to be distributed as prizes.

The contestants already in the field, of course, have an advantage. There is every reason for starting now. Ask your friends to save for your candidate the coupons from The Georgian and Sunday American. They will do it gladly.

Your Friends Will Help.
Ask your friends who do not subscribe for The Georgian and American to subscribe. You will be asking them to do a favor to themselves, for they will get at no advance over the regular price the best newspaper in the South, besides helping you.

And if all your friends already subscribe to The Georgian and American, as no doubt most of them do, ask them to pay in advance. They will gain by this, as well as you.

Remember, there are eight districts in the city; two prizes for the State at large, one outside the State, besides the prizes for carriers and agents.

A subscription to the daily and Sunday papers for one year counts for 3,500 votes. Subscriptions for less terms count in a carefully graduated scale down to 100 votes for one month's subscription to the daily alone.

Not Limited in Territory.

The districts are not pitted against each other. Contests are on an absolutely equal footing. All you have to do to win is to get more votes than any other contestant in your own neighborhood. You are not limited to your own neighborhood in taking subscriptions or obtaining vote coupons, but can have votes credited to you for coupons or subscriptions received from your friends regardless of where they live.

Meanwhile, do not overlook your opportunity to enjoy a play at the Atlanta Theater free of all cost.

Miss Billy Long is playing there you know. This week the attraction is "The Butterfly on the Wheel," an attraction which made a profound sensation in New York.

The Georgian and American have no seats for this week's performances, but we have watched the production carefully in order to be able to tell our readers what they may expect from the company.

We are glad to be able to announce that the stock company headed by Miss Long demonstrates that it is capable of giving a splendid production of the most trying play. "The Butterfly on the Wheel" are booked for succeeding weeks, and, without reservation, we can promise our readers the opportunity of seeing as good theatrical attractions as it ever has been the good fortune of Atlanta to enjoy.

Remember, there is no contest for theater seats. Simply clip the coupons from Thursday, Friday and Saturday issues of The Georgian and from next Sunday's American, mail them in, and get a reserved seat in the best part of the house.

PASTOR PRAYS FOR JUSTICE AT GIRL'S FUNERAL

Mother and Aunt of Mary Phagan Swoon at Burial in Marietta This Morning.

A thousand persons saw a minister of God raise his hands to heaven today and heard him call for divine justice.

Before his closed eyes was a little casket, its pure whiteness hid by the banks and banks of beautiful flowers.

Within the casket lay the bruised and mutilated body of Mary Phagan, the innocent young victim of one of Atlanta's blackest and most bestial crimes.

The spirit of the terrible tragedy filled the air. An aunt of the strangled girl suddenly screamed, fell over in her seat and was carried from the church in a swoon from which she did not fully recover for hours.

The stricken mother collapsed and it was feared that her condition might become critical.

The scene was in the Second Baptist Church at Marietta, where Mary Phagan had lived when she was a child of only three or four years. An immense crowd was at the station when the funeral train arrived at 10 o'clock. Many of them were young people who had played about with the strangled victim when she had lived these years before.

Mother Collapses at Station.
Just as Mrs. W. J. Coleman, mother of Mary, was being helped into a cab, the pure white coffin was lifted from the car. Mrs. Coleman saw it and the single glance was sufficient to awake afresh the torrent of fearful memories.

She screamed and fell into the arms of her husband. It was some time before she could be taken to the church to witness the rites over her daughter whose life had been sacrificed to the brutality of some man.

"Nearer, My God, to Thee," sang the choir when the little casket was borne into the church and carried forward, where it was covered with flowers.

Rev. T. T. Linkus, of the Christian Church at East Point, whose Sunday school Mary had attended in the earlier years of her laughing, happy childhood, was the minister.

"May God bring the man guilty of this terrible crime to justice," was the supplication of the minister as he raised his hands above him.

"May God aid the officers of the law in detecting and bringing behind the bars such a man," he continued.

Aunt Screams and Faints.

His words were interrupted first by the sobs of one member of the family and then by another. Miss Lizzie Phagan, an aunt of the strangled girl, uttered a piercing scream. She was unconscious when those by her picked her up. She was taken home in a carriage and Dr. W. M. Kemp was called. He had great difficulty in reviving the grief-stricken woman.

W. J. Phagan, the girl's aged grandfather, sat with his white head bowed in sorrow. The tears, ran down his furrowed cheeks unheeded. He was utterly broken and crushed by the calamity which had visited him and his family in his last years.

All the way from New York, where he was on board one of the United States battleships, came Benjamin Phagan to witness the tragic funeral of his innocent young sister. With him were his brothers, Joshua and Charles, and his sister, Ollie Phagan. A sad procession moved to the little cemetery where the coffin was lowered into the grave that had been prepared. Mrs. Coleman collapsed again at the grave and it is greatly feared that she will be seriously affected by the ordeal through which she has passed.

FACTORY HEAD FRANK AND WATCHMAN NEWT LEE ARE "SWEATED" BY POLICE

Leo M. Frank.

Mysterious Action of Officials Gives New and Startling Turn to Hunt for Guilty Man—Attorney Rosser, Barred, Later Admitted to Client.

Has the Phagan murder mystery been solved? The police say they know the guilty man.

Chief of Detectives Lanford at 2 o'clock this afternoon told The Georgian:

"We have evidence in hand which will clear the mystery in the next few hours and satisfy the public."

All the afternoon the police have been "sweating" Leo M. Frank, superintendent of the factory where the girl worked, and putting through the "third degree" Lee, the negro watchman at the factory.

A blood-stained shirt, which the detectives say they found at the home of Lee, was shown to the negro this afternoon in an effort to break him down.

The negro admitted the shirt was his, but declared that he had not seen it before for two years.

Lee was under a grueling fire of questions all day. Shortly before Superintendent Frank was brought to the station Detective Black came from the home of Lee. He carried a package under his arm. He would not divulge its contents, but very soon after it was obtained Frank was under arrest and Lee was confronted with the garment.

There was an unconfirmed rumor that Lee had broken down and given most important information to the police.

Detective Black and Harry Scott, Pinkerton man, left police headquarters at 2:30 for West End to arrest a negro woman friend of the black prisoner. The net was evidently being tightened about Newt Lee, the night watchman.

Superintendent Leo M. Frank, head officer of the National Pencil Company, was taken from the factory shortly before noon by Detective Black and Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons.

The police say that Frank is not under arrest, that he was put under police guard for his own personal safety, and that there are no charges against him.

Why, then, did the police act?

There must be some reason other than the man's personal safety, under consideration. Frank has not yet figured as of importance in the case.

Attorney Barred, Then Admitted

Luther G. Rosser, attorney for Frank, endeavored to see his client. The police refused to let him do so.

Why?

Lawyer Rosser retired hastily declaring he would apply to Judge Bell for a writ of habeas corpus for his client, and would take him out of the control of the police.

Later, when Rosser's determination to fight for Frank became known, Chief Beavers admitted that the exclusion of Rosser "was a mistake," that the police orders had been taken too literally, and Rosser was then permitted to talk to his client. Rosser abandoned his plan to sue out a writ of habeas corpus.

The police "explanation" only added mystery to mystery, and really explained nothing.

When Rosser reached the police station he was told that strict orders had been given against anyone seeing Frank.

If Frank was not under arrest, by what right was his lawyer forbidden to see him?

As soon as the police station was reached Frank was taken at once into the detectives' office and the doors were barred against all.

The detectives would say nothing of what took place behind the closed doors. The detective office is on the third floor. At the bottom of the stairs on the second floor. Call Officer John West was stationed to bar all who attempted to go to the floor above.

Frank To Be Kept Under Guard

It was learned late this afternoon that Frank will be held on the technical charge of "suspicion." He will not be placed in a cell, but he will be under guard. An extra policeman will be employed to keep watch over the factory superintendent in the police station and Frank will pay for the services of this man.

Luther G. Rosser, counsel for Frank, would not make a def-site statement this afternoon as to his plans for obtaining the freedom of his client. He said that he would institute proceedings if he considered Frank was being held an unnecessarily long time.

At the same time that the Frank proceedings were under way Guber & Jackson, attorneys for J. M. Gantt, also in custody in connection with the crime, made formal application for a writ of habeas corpus before Judge Bell and a hearing was set for 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Frank previously had been questioned by the police. He was brought to the station Monday morning in company with his attorneys and there made a lengthy and detailed statement to the detectives.

The authorities had announced they believed Frank had no knowledge of the crime. Their sudden action to-day appears to be freighted with great significance in view of the fact that they have already quizzed him as to all he knew in connection with the affair.

At the factory of the pencil company reporters were suddenly excluded.

"We've been harassed enough by the reporters of the newspapers," was the explanation volunteered by Ed Montag, in charge. "This plant has had all the notoriety it wants."

In the working ranks of the National Pencil Company is believed to be the last hope of solving the great strangling mystery. If these workers are barred to the press and to the public and admission is denied to the factory, those in authority have effectually closed one of the most important avenues for the solution of the crime.

Frank Last in Building

Frank, to a Georgian reporter, just before his arrest, said:

"No one is more anxious to learn of the whereabouts of Mary Phagan Saturday afternoon and night than I am. The company is exerting every effort to get information and has employed a Pinkerton detective to work on the case. Officials of the company also thought it best to retain counsel to assist in the investigation, while every one of the foremen and head men about the factory is endeavoring to find out if any of the employees know anything."

"I deeply regret the carelessness shown by the police department in not making a complete investigation as to finger prints and other evidence before a great throng of people were allowed to enter the place."

"The affair is exceedingly embarrassing to me. To know that the authorities even felt that they should detain me for a while and question me leaves a bad taste, and I am doing everything possible to locate the guilty man."

Arthur White and Harry Denham, the last two workmen in the factory plant the day of the tragedy, declared to The Georgian that when they left the building shortly after 3 o'clock in the afternoon Superintendent Frank was the only man remaining.

White's statement follows:

"Denham and I went to the factory to work on Saturday, although it was a holiday. We left shortly after 3 o'clock in the afternoon."

"We punched our time at exactly 3:10 o'clock."

"On our way out I stopped in Mr. Frank's office and borrowed two dollars of him. Denham went in with me. Neither of us saw anyone else in the building. When we left Frank was the only person remaining."

Saw Gantt in Pool Room

"Denham and I stayed together most of the afternoon, and in the evening we went to the Globe pool rooms on Broad Street, near Marietta. We had been in there a little while when I saw John Gantt come in. He did not play, but sat down and watched the game."

"In a little while we went out, but returned in a few minutes and stayed until after 10 o'clock. Finally he said that he guessed he would go home, and that was the last I saw of him."

Denham's statement is substantially the same. He said that he saw no one else in the factory aside from his fellow workman, White, and Superintendent Frank.

Mrs. Leo Frank, wife of the superintendent of the pencil factory, declared to-day before the arrest that her husband was anxious to do everything in his power to clear up the Mary Phagan mystery and regarded the feeling against him as totally unwarranted.

"I do not care to go into any of the details of the crime," said Mrs. Frank. "My husband is at the office and is perfectly competent to give out all information. Any knowledge I have of the affair I got from him."

"All that I know is that he is doing everything to solve the mystery. He has engaged detectives and is personally investigating many of the clues."

An investigation was conducted at the plant of the pencil factory this afternoon in an effort to find some employee who positively had seen the Phagan girl after she drew her pay Saturday noon at the office of Superintendent Frank. The canvass of employees was made under the direction of Frank himself.

Mrs. Leo M. Frank, wife of the factory superintendent; his father and brother called at the police station this afternoon to aid the closely guarded Frank.

They were not given admittance at once, as Frank was undergoing an examination in the office of the detectives. They were taken to the office of Probation Officer Cogler, where they waited.

Restraining her tears with difficulty, Mrs. Frank declared her belief in the entire innocence of her husband. She preferred not to talk at length of the case and said that it had not been discussed in their home.

She broke down several times while talking and burst into tears, but recovered herself and continued the conversation.

"My husband is absolutely innocent and able to take care of

YOUTH HELD IN PHAGAN CASE

John M. Gantt, held in connection with the investigation of the strangling of little Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory. Here Gantt is shown reading the warrant for his arrest on a charge of murder. He stoutly denies any connection with the crime. An alibi story, told by his sister, may clear him of suspicion.

himself in the matter," she said. "I would rather that any statements should come from him. We discussed the matter hardly at all in our home."

Mrs. Frank is a striking appearing woman of about 30 years. With her were her father, E. Selig, 68 East Georgia Avenue, of the West Disinfectant Company, and a brother-in-law, A. E. Marcus, of the Marcus Clothing Company.

Frank's Rise in Company Rapid

Frank is 27 years old and has been married three years. His wife was Miss Lucile Selig. Frank and his wife live with her father at 68 East Georgia Avenue.

Frank was induced to come to Atlanta about five years ago by his uncle, E. M. Frank, of this city. He formerly lived in New York, and was in the employ of the Sturdevant Fan Company. He is an expert mechanic and his rise has been rapid with the National Pencil Company. Coming here in a minor capacity, he was not long in being promoted to a position of authority. A short time later he was made superintendent.

WATERS TO FIGHT PAVING CONTRACT

Atlanta Will Lose $25,000 This Year on High-Priced Asphalt, Commissioner Says.

County Commissioner Tull C. Waters to-day announced he would open a fight on the county's asphalt contracts at the next meeting of the Commission. He said he could not understand why Commissioners Shelby Smith, W. T. Winn and S. B. Turman insisted on higher price material when scientific tests proved it was not better than low priced material.

"Chief of Construction Clayton is right in this controversy," said Commissioner Waters. "Chemical analysis is the proper way to determine the worth of asphalt. Why should the county pay $44 a ton for asphalt when the analyses show we can buy material just as good for $21.75? This would make a difference of more than $25,000 this year."

WEDDING HELD UP 2 HOURS BY JINX

Augustans Go to Justice When Only Minister Available Refuses to Marry Divorcee.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Campbell to-day are speeding West on a marriage tour which began last night after hours of delay, because every Atlanta minister was attending the Sociological Congress.

From 5 until 6:20 o'clock their search was thorough and diligent—from one church and parsonage to another, while a crowd of friends followed. Finally Rev. C. T. A. Pise was located at his home, 19 Brown Place.

REWARD OF $1,000 URGED BY MAYOR

Brown Offers $200 for Capture of Slayer—C. C. Jones Also Gives $100.

Governor Joseph M. Brown to-day offered a reward of $200 for the apprehension and conviction of the murderer of little Mary Phagan and Mayor James G. Woodward issued a call for a special meeting of Council for tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, urging a $1,000 reward.

Governor Brown's decision was reached on receipt of the following letter from Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey:

"From the best information obtainable, it is my belief that the circumstances surrounding the death of little Mary Phagan indicate a most brutal murder, probably attended with another horrible and detestable crime."

"The officers of the local police and detective departments seem to be using their best efforts toward the solution of the mystery, but I believe it advisable to ask that you offer a reward for the apprehension, with evidence to convict, of the guilty party."

The Mayor's message follows: "To the General Council, City of Atlanta: "Gentlemen—The General Council of the city of Atlanta is hereby called to convene in special session to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, April 30, 1913, to take cognizance, in an official way, of that most brutal crime that was committed in this city on last Saturday night."

STEPFATHER OF DEAD GIRL OUTSPOKEN AGAINST NEGRO WATCHMAN, NEWT LEE

That Mary Phagan never left the factory after she entered it at 12:15 o'clock Saturday, the day of her murder, and that she was killed and her body dragged into the basement by the negro night watchman, Newt Lee, now in jail, is the firm belief of the child's stepfather, W. J. Coleman, and other members of her family.

As for Arthur Mullinax, former street car conductor, held on suspicion, Mr. Coleman told a Georgian reporter he thought him innocent of the crime. He was also very doubtful if J. M. Gantt, ex-bookkeeper for the pencil factory, where the girl worked, had anything to do with her murder or knew anything about it.

"If the negro watchman did not kill the child, how would it have been impossible for him to hear her screams going on in the building?" he asked. "A lively stable man next door heard them, and it would have been much easier for the watchman to, if the black did not do it himself, then he must have known something about it, and who the person was who did it."

Outlines Theory of Murder. Then, in broken tones, for he had just returned from making all arrangements for taking the girl's body to Marietta, Ga., to be buried, he outlined his idea of how she met her death.

"When Mary turned from the window after receiving her money," he said, "I think that, instead of going directly out, she went to the dressing room, perhaps for a drink of water, as one of the notes found said: Superintendent Frank, missing her when he came out and supposing she had left the building, locked her in. The negro watchman must have seen her go into the dressing room, and a little later seized her and gagged her."

Later developments in the story go to show that the spot where the child's hair was found caught on a steel lathe was not the scene of her struggle with her assailant. In the dressing room, it was said by a member of her family, there were plain evidences that the attack was made. She was also gagged in the room, for a strip of her new lavender dress was cut off from the front and bound around her mouth to keep her from screaming.

Ribbon Found Near Boiler. Another bit of evidence, it was said, that went to throw added suspicion on the black was a bow of the child's blue ribbon and a handkerchief found down near the boiler, where he constantly stayed.

"The negro evidently kept the child in the factory all day," Mr. Coleman said, "and was afraid to attack her until midnight for fear she would scream or somebody would come. He may or may not have knocked her senseless from the first, or he may have tied her. I do not know, but when Gantt entered the shop it is more than likely that he knew nothing of the girl's presence there and simply went up and got his shoes, as he said, and went out again."

All this about Mary having been seen on the street at midnight or at any other time after 12 o'clock in the day I do not think can be true. I believe she remained all day in the building. After the negro did the work, he was afraid to leave or not to notify the police, which would make appearances worse for him. Therefore he called the officers."

Now Clears Mullinax. Mr. Coleman said he had at first given credence to a report that Mary had come home at 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and that Mullinax, meeting her as she got off of the car, had taken her back to town with him. This report, Mr. Coleman said, turned out to be untrue. The conductor had made a mistake, and the girl Mullinax was with Miss Pearl Robinson, of Bellwood, as he swore in jail.

This was corroborated by the conductor himself, J. C. Horne, 11 Cora Place, on whose car the reporter rode out to the Coleman home on Lindsay Street. The conductor said that taken his car out and, knowing Mullinax, he had talked with him and the girl, who at that time he thought was Mary Phagan. When Mullinax and Miss Robinson reached their corner Mullinax remarked that it was a bit chilly and he was going home to build a fire. It was later that they returned to the theater, the conductor said, but on whose car he did not know.

TRAGIC FACE OF STRANGLED MARY PHAGAN--NEW PICTURE STUDIES

A photographic study of the victim in the strangling mystery showing the sad expression in her eyes.

CHARGE IS BASEST OF LIES, DECLARES GANTT, ACCUSED

John Milton Gantt, the accusation of a terrible crime hanging over him, from his cell at police headquarters, has made to-day a complete denial of any connection with the Mary Phagan murder in the first formal statement to the public since his arrest in Marietta yesterday afternoon.

The statement, which was given to a Georgian reporter, was said by Chief Beavers to be substantially the same as that taken by the police department stenographer last night for the use of the city detectives.

This remarkable denial, if it is to be given credence, sweeps away a whole train of circumstantial evidence that appeared most strongly to connect him with the brutal tragedy.

He Is Contradicted.

E. F. Holloway, timekeeper for the National Pencil Company, told a Georgian reporter that he had it from Gantt's own lips that he had been out with the Phagan girl.

He never even walked home with the girl, he insists.

Mary Phagan, one of the girls employed with Mary Phagan, told the authorities that she had heard the girls at the factory say that Gantt was in love with Mary and waited to walk home with her frequently.

Gantt declares in his statement that he was at the home of his half-sister, Mrs. F. C. Terrell, 284 East Linden Street, the night that the murder was committed, going there directly from a pool room.

A woman describing herself as Gantt's half-sister, is said by the police to have told two plain clothes men that Gantt was not only with her, but slept with her on Sunday night; that he had not been there for some time and was on his way to California.

Reverse Statements.

To-day Mrs. Terrell reversed the statement that is said to have been made to the plain clothes men and declared that Gantt not only was there, but slept with her on Sunday night.

Gantt's statement in full follows: "I do not deny going to the pencil factory Saturday afternoon. My purpose in going there was to get a pair of shoes I had left there when I quit work there about three weeks ago.

"After getting my shoes from the factory, I walked around town for a time and at about 7:30 in the evening met Arthur White, who works for the pencil company. With him I went to the Globe Pool Rooms on Broad Street, near Marietta.

"I didn't play, but sat down and watched them for several hours, leaving there probably at 10:30 o'clock. I went to the home of my half-sister, Mrs. F. C. Terrell, 284 East Linden Street, where I have been staying and she let me in the house. Mrs. Terrell's husband is superintendent of the Forsyth Building.

Slept All Night.

"I suppose she let me in about 11 o'clock and I went directly to bed. I slept all night until Sunday morning.

"I didn't hear of the murder until Sunday night when I went to call on a young woman with whom I have been going. She is Miss Annie Chambers, of 18 Warren Place. I went there about 8 o'clock Sunday evening.

"Her brother Phil—who works at the National Pencil Company's plant, rushed into the room and said that a girl had been murdered in the basement of the factory. He did not know who it was. That was the very first I heard of the crime.

"I did not learn the horrible details of the murder until I read them in the papers Monday morning.

"I was not trying to escape when I went to Marietta Monday morning. I had bought a crop near Marietta and was going up there to farm. I had made arrangements some time ago with my mother to see her Monday and my trip there was simply to fill that arrangement.

Basest Sort of a Lie.

"I would not harm any girl, least of all the daughter of Mrs. Coleman. Ten years ago I knew Mrs. Coleman, when she was Mrs. Phagan and lived near Marietta in Cobb County. Mary was just a little girl then about four years old. From the time I knew her, she was as little more than a toddling child until I went to work in the pencil factory last June I never saw her.

"I never went out with Mary after I started work in the factory. I never walked home with her. I never was any more to her than I was to the 175 other girls at the factory. I spoke to her as I might to any of the others, but that was all.

"The charge that I had any part in her destruction is the basest sort of a lie and an injustice."

Talk of Habeas Corpus.

The determined fight instituted to gain the immediate freedom of Gantt was another of the new features of the most sensational tragedy Atlanta has had in years. Backed by relatives of influence and a family of good repute, Gantt was no more in his cell at police headquarters than an effort to obtain his liberty was started.

"Either give him an immediate preliminary hearing or I will institute habeas corpus proceedings," was the ultimatum delivered to Chief of Detectives Lanford by Judge George F. Guber, member of the law firm of Guber & Jackson, and a relative of the accused man.

"He is an innocent man. He is as guiltless as the babe in arms. He is entitled to an immediate hearing on this terrible accusation that has been made against him. Either this must be granted or I will take a course to obtain his liberty."

As Chief of Detectives Lanford refused the immediate hearing, the authorities awaited in expectancy to observe the success Judge Guber would

IS THE GUILTY MAN AMONG THOSE HELD?

Is the murderer of Mary Phagan among the four men who are being held at police headquarters, or is he still at large, either among those still unsuspected or among those who have been severely quizzed by the officers?

The men still in custody are:

- 1—Newt Lee, negro night watchman, who is thought to know much more about the crime than he has told, but who has not been regarded as the perpetrator;
- 2—Arthur Mullinax, former street car conductor, for whom a strong alibi has been established, and from whom suspicion is shifting;
- 3—Geron Bailey, negro elevator boy, who has been held as a material witness, but against whom no evidence has been obtained;
- 4—J. M. Gantt, former employee of the National Pencil Company, located at the plant on Saturday, and identified as the "man with a little girl on Saturday night." In neither Mullinax's nor Gantt's case do the police place much dependence on the so-called identifications.

SLAYER'S HAND PRINT LEFT ON ARM OF GIRL

Hope for apprehension of the slayer of Mary Phagan has come to the police with the discovery of distinct finger prints, stamped in blood on the sleeve of the dead girl's jacket.

The discovery was made by a Georgian reporter in the course of a minute inspection of the girl's clothes yesterday evening. The finger prints are on the right arm of the light silk dress.

The imprints of two fingers are just below the shoulder, staining purple the lavender of the child's dress and penetrating to the arm, as if they were established at the pressure of powerful fingers grasping her arm.

A third print is that of a thumb, blurred somewhat as with a great pressure, but offering possibilities of analysis. With the discovery of the finger prints, detectives employed in the case believe they have a tangible clue. The Bertillon system of detection will be brought into play, and suspects will be placed through its unflinching catechism.

The search for other finger prints will be made zealously. Detectives of the Pinkerton agency, several of whom are on the case, are known to affect largely this mode of detection, on the theory that every man has his distinctive finger prints, and that the impressions of the fingers of no two individuals are identical.

The evidence borne in finger prints is regarded as conclusive in modern courts. On this fact the police of Atlanta to-day are hoping more firmly than ever that they will be successful in their trail of the man who killed little Mary Phagan.

Dr. J. W. Hurt, County Physician, conducted last night a close examination of Mary Phagan's body, in the effort to determine the nature of the injuries inflicted by her brutal slayer. He entered alone the chamber in which the dead girl lay, and at the conclusion of his inspection, refused to make a report of what he had found out.

SISTER'S NEW STORY LIKELY TO CLEAR GANTT AS SUSPECT

F. C. Terrell, 284 East Linden Avenue, told a Georgian reporter to-day that his wife had declared to him that she did not tell the truth to the detectives and Georgian reporters to whom she had said that she did not know where J. M. Gantt, accused of the murder of pretty Mary Phagan, was on Saturday night.

When seen soon after the discovery of the deed, Mrs. Terrell stated that Gantt, who is her half brother, had left her home where he had been for the past seven years, three weeks ago, presumably to go to California and that she had not seen him since.

"Most certainly he was in his room here Saturday night," declared Mrs. Terrell to a Georgian reporter to-day. "He came in at 11 o'clock."

"I ate breakfast with Mr. Gantt Sunday morning," said a young woman, an inmate of the Terrell home. "Yes," said little Willie Terrell, "Mr. Gantt slept with me Saturday night. And I had to wake up at 4 o'clock to get my little brother up to carry my papers and Mr. Gantt was still in bed."

"No, I had not seen Gantt for three weeks," declared F. C. Terrell, brother-in-law of the accused. A moment later, Mr. Terrell said that Gantt had been back in town for four or five days and that he was certainly in his house Saturday night.

"I heard my wife get up and let him in at 11 o'clock," declared Terrell.

A Georgian reporter called at the Terrell residence to find that Mrs. Terrell was in a state approaching a nervous collapse and much excited in her manner. She was vehement in her declaration that Gantt was in bed at 11 o'clock Saturday night.

In a few moments her husband, who is engineer at the Forsyth Building, came in, and before seeing his wife was interviewed by a reporter.

Strange Contradictions. "Yes," said he, "Gantt had been gone three weeks and I hadn't seen anything of him. He was a quiet fellow in his habits, always came home early at nights and we were surprised to hear that he is suspected of this crime."

"The first I heard of it was Monday morning when my brother-in-law, J. N. Gantt at Marietta called me up and told me they had arrested Gantt."

"But did not you just say that the detectives were here at your house Sunday afternoon and had questioned your wife as to Gantt's whereabouts," asked the reporter.

"Yes," was the reply, "but my wife did not tell me anything about the detectives being out here."

"You see my wife has not been well for a long time and she was very nervous and scared and she did not want the detectives fooling around her and she told them a story to keep them from coming again."

She admitted to me that she had falsified to them. "I heard my wife get up at 11 o'clock and let some one in, and she told me it was Gantt."

"I thought you said that Gantt had left here three weeks ago and that you did not know anything about him," volunteered the reporter.

Sure He Came In. "Oh, no! He had been back here four or five days. He started to California, to Los Angeles, to take a position, but didn't get any further than Memphis. He ran into the floods out there, got tied up and decided to come back."

"Yes, I am sure my wife got up and let him in; I was awake at the time. And I saw him Sunday morning too."

Mr. Terrell declared that he had just left the police station where he had been and talked with Gantt. "He's just as cool as a cucumber," said Mr. Terrell, "and he laughs at the idea of his being accused of the murder. He is just as confident of being cleared as if it was already decided."

He saw the young woman in the morgue, at Bloomfield's undertaking establishment, and it is understood he positively identified her to city detectives and the County Solicitor. She looked very much like the young woman, he said, but he would not make the positive statement to a reporter to-day.

He went to police station this morning to see Gantt and declared the prisoner looked much like the man who applied to him for a room.

Bartender Confirms Gantt's Statement

Says Phagan Suspect Left Pair of Shoes in His Place Saturday Evening.

Charles W. McGee, of Colonial Hills, a bartender in the saloon of J. P. Hunter at 38 South Forsyth Street, almost directly across from the National Pencil Company plant, corroborated to-day the story told by J. M. Gantt about leaving a pair of shoes in the saloon from Saturday night until Monday morning.

"The man I judge to be Gantt from the description came into the saloon, but stayed only a short time," said McGee. "I noticed nothing suspicious about Gantt or the man who was with him."

Chicago Theater Will Hold 'Remnant' Sales

Cuts to 50 Cents $2.50 Seats Unsold Hour Before the Performance Begins.

CHICAGO, April 29.—A "remnant" sale of tickets is announced by a leading downtown theater. Hereafter all seats unsold at 1:30 o'clock on matinee days and 7:30 o'clock at night will be sold at 50 cents. The first of the sales will be to-morrow night.

Regular prices range from $2.50 to 75 cents. Managers of other theaters said the plan would bring about a small advance sale and a jam at the box office an hour before the curtain rose.

GUILT WILL BE FIXED BY NIGHT, OFFICIALS SAY

Admit Chain of Evidence Is Still Tangled, but Assert Solution Is Near.

Has the murderer of pretty little Mary Phagan slipped the net that the police most carefully spread for him?

Is the author of the crime that shocked the city and State with its terrible brutality still at large?

Is the mystery, as baffling in its myriad conflicting elements as it is revolting in its details, still as far from solution as it was when the beaten and bruised little body of Mary Phagan was found lifeless in a pile of trash and litter in a Forsyth Street basement?

When the city detectives and Pinkertons picked up the twisted skeins of evidence this morning they admitted that they were as badly tangled as when they laid them down after working incessantly upon them until long after midnight.

They are positive, however, that the guilt will be almost certainly fixed before nightfall. It only remains to follow each thread of evidence out to "To what person will the damning thread lead?" is the question that is holding the entire city in suspense.

No other tragedy in years has so gripped the people as this one of the laughing, innocent girl lured to her death.

When the final truth is known will the accusing finger-point of guilt be leveled at—

Newt Lee, the negro night watchman, against whom suspicion was strongly directed to-day, although he at first was held only as an important witness.

Or—

Arthur Mullinax, of 60 Poplar Street, formerly a street car conductor, who was the first man arrested and seriously regarded as the possible murderer. The evidence against him is slight.

Or—

J. M. Gantt, an employee of the National Pencil Company until three weeks ago, arrested as he got off a car in Marietta yesterday. The evidence against him is far from convincing.

Or—

Geron Bailey, negro elevator man in the pencil factory, who was arrested at about the same time as Mullinax and held as a material witness.

Or—

Some man whose name has not been previously mentioned in connection with the case.

Police Expect Results.

The police are confident that they will know in a few hours the identity of the slayer.

Chief Beavers, Chief of Detectives Lanford, Detectives Black, Starnes, Hasset, Rosser and Bullard and Pinkerton operatives were on the case again early this morning. Out of the many clues obtained yesterday they expected to get a definite lead and bring order out of the confusion that hampered the first two days' work.

They have everybody in custody against whom suspicion has been strongly directed. They have a mass of information and a mass of testimony, much of which is conflicting. From this they will eliminate the inaccurate and improbable and proceed carefully to weave the net of evidence.

No mystery in recent years has served to excite the public mind as the Phagan murder. Detective headquarters have been thronged with persons who have believed that they had clues to the perpetrator of the crime.

All day yesterday was a ceaseless procession going into the detectives' offices and another procession coming out. The officers were harassed as much as they were aided.

Many Worthless Clues.

Countless persons came to give general information about Mullinax, or Gantt, or Lee, or Bailey. Others came to identify Mullinax as the man they had seen with a girl on a certain street at a certain time Saturday night. Others were sure that it was Gantt they had seen.

Some of the information was absolutely worthless and some was regarded as furnishing possible clues. While some of the officers were hearing the various tales of these people, other detectives were putting the prisoners through a grilling examination of their whereabouts at every minute of Saturday night.

Third Degree for Lee.

Newt Lee, the black night watchman, was given the "third degree" in the belief that he knew much more about the crime than he professed. He showed signs of weakening several times, but each time recovered before he had made any admissions seriously damaging either to himself or any of the other prisoners.

The shifting of suspicion to Lee was the most startling development of this forenoon, although what basis it had in actual evidence is hard to determine. It is known that the Coleman family are inclined to believe that he knows a great deal more about the crime than he has been pleased to tell. Screams in the building were heard by persons in the lively stable nearby, according to stories current to-day. How could Lee have made his rounds every half hour and not have heard them, members of the Coleman family ask.

O. L. Bagley, shipping clerk for the Atlanta Milling Company, was with Gantt Saturday night and left him a few minutes after 10 o'clock, according to a statement to a Georgian reporter. Bagley declared: "Gantt is not a casual acquaintance of mine, though I have known him for about a year. I do not believe he is the kind of man who would have committed the crime."

"I met him early Saturday night in the Globe pool room and talked to MISS PEARL ROBINSON, sweetheart of Arthur Mullinax, the man questioned by the police in connection with the slaying of Mary Phagan. Her story cleared Mullinax of any suspicion of complicity in the crime which has shocked Atlanta.

LOYALTY SENDS GIRL TO DEFEND MULLINAX

Brave little Pearl Robinson!

Her loyalty and devotion to Arthur Mullinax, one of the four men held in connection with the brutal strangling of Mary Phagan, form the only bright feature in a sordid and revolting crime.

What did she care for the stares of the groups of people that hung about the detective headquarters when the life of her lover appeared to be in danger?

What did she care for the remarks that were directed at her when she pushed and shoved her way through the morbid crowds awaiting for a new sensation?

What difference did it make to her that her name instantly would be on the lips of everyone as the defender of a man pointed out by one witness as the mysterious person with little Mary Phagan the last time she was seen alive?

Love Gave Her Courage.

It was the ages-old story of a woman's heart refusing to believe any ill of the man to whom it is pledged and devoted.

In the young heart of pretty Pearl Robinson was implanted that eternally feminine and eternally remarkable attribute as deeply as though she were twice her 16 years.

She knew Arthur Mullinax, liked him, probably loved him with the implicit trust of a woman. He had been good to her, kind to her, and always gentle and courteous. That was enough. He could not have been guilty of the terrible deed that has shocked a community as it has not been shocked before in years.

ple, other detectives were putting the prisoners through a grilling examination of their whereabouts at every minute of Saturday night.

"I met him early Saturday night in the Globe pool room and talked to him some time. My brother and a friend of Gantt's, named White, were playing a game of pool. Gantt does not play and we sat down and watched my brother and White. About 10 o'clock Gantt and myself strolled out of the pool room and walked around. We went a block or two out Whitehall Street, then turned and came back, walking back to Alabama Street and up Alabama to Broad Street. I told Gantt that I was going to catch a car and he said he would go back to the pool room. I noticed that he walked up Broad Street, my car came along and I went home. I caught the 10:30 o'clock car."

Had Started West.

"In the course of our conversation Gantt told me that he had left Atlanta to go to San Francisco and had gotten as far as St. Louis but had been held up there several days on account of high water. He said he then changed his mind and came back to Atlanta."

"He also told me that he probably would go to farming; that his mother had offered to give him a 500-acre farm near Marietta."

"That Gantt could have met the Phagan girl later in the night and committed the crime appears improbable to me, as most of his conversation was about him preparing to get married in August. He seemed to be very much in love with the young lady."

"Our meeting Saturday night was accidental. I had not seen him for three or four weeks and asked him where he had been. He then told me of going to St. Louis."

NUDE DANCERS' PICTURES UPON FACTORY WALLS

Suggestive Illustrations Clipped From Magazines Pasted Up About Scene of Tragedy.

Pictures of Salome dancers in scanty raiment, and of chorus girls in different postures adorned the walls of the National Pencil Company's plant. They had been clipped from a theatrical and prize-fighting magazine.

A more melodramatic stage setting for a rendezvous or for the committing of a murder could hardly have been obtained. The building is cut up with partitions, which allow of a person passing about from one part to another without attracting the attention of others. While the main entrance is used in gaining entrance to the building, the first floor is vacant, this space having formerly been leased out by the National Pencil Company. A person could enter the building, descend the ladder to the cellar and not attract the attention of those above. One could likewise move from one floor to the other without being noticed.

Stygian blackness greets those who enter the cellar. Two gas jets afford a flickering, sickly light, which seems only to add to the pitchy darkness.

Temptations Many.

That temptations probably were laid across the path of the girls who worked in the plant was not denied by Superintendent Leo Frank. Instead he admitted that it was highly probable.

"In a plant of this size, where 170 people are employed, and among them a large number of girls, it is quite probable that some of them were approached by some of the men working in the shop," said Mr. Frank. "A force of this kind is continually shifting, and undoubtedly many low characters have worked there. It has been our effort to eliminate them as much as possible and the foreman have been strict in this regard."

"Under the present conditions of morals in Atlanta, with the segregated district abolished, these low characters undoubtedly have grown worse. That our janitor was bribed to allow them in the building, while a surprise to me, is not an unbelievable suggestion. Such fellows as these might be expected to stoop to such things."

'Bally' Customs Men Hold Wedding Gifts

Sir Wilfred Peck Declines to Pay Duties on $10,000 Worth of Presents for His Bride.

NEW YORK, April 29.—This is Sir Wilfred Peck's opinion of the United States customs officials, expressed to-day:

"I say, my word, what a bally, blasted, mercenary set you chaps are."

Sir Wilfred landed to-day on the liner Lapland. With him were about $10,000 worth of bridal presents intended for Miss Edwina Thornburg, a St. Louis beauty and heiress to whom he will be married on May 7.

The customs officials insisted on turning Sir Wilfred's trunks topsy turvey, after which he told Sir Wilfred he would have to pay 45 per cent duty on the presents. Sir Wilfred balked.

"I can't do it, 'know," he exclaimed. "The mercenary chaps" were obdurate. Sir Wilfred finally quit the pier, leaving his wedding gifts behind.

"But I know Mary's safe," said Mrs. Coleman, and after a few minutes they all went to bed.

The Awful News.

When Helen Ferguson's footsteps touched the front porch at 5 o'clock the sound waked her mother immediately.

"There's Mary now!" Mrs. Coleman exclaimed as she sat up on the bed. "No, it isn't either," declared Mr. Coleman. "I feel it's news for us, and bad news."

Mrs. Coleman went to the door. "Mrs. Coleman," said Miss Henderson, "did you know that Mary had been killed?"

"Oh, it can't be possible!" her mother sobbed. "What do you mean? I don't understand you. Tell me how. Maybe you're mistaken—maybe it isn't Mary."

But Miss Henderson said that Miss Hicks was positive in her identification.

And then Mr. Coleman came out and brought her mother in the house, she was crying so, and then as quickly as he could be dressed and went downtown to look at the body. There was no mistake. It was Mar.

Her voice was pitifully like a child's when she had finished, as she asked The Georgian reporter if he thought the man would be captured.

"If they get him they ought to treat him just like he treated her," she declared. "Oh, my poor little sister! He had no pity for her, and they ought to have any for him. Oh, God, I just feel as if I could die."

She will attend the funeral of her sister in Marietta, going up with the family Tuesday. She was formerly employed at a downtown department store, but recently gave up her position. She is very pretty and attractive, slenderly built and resembles her sister to some extent, it is said.

Mrs. Mayer and her husband had many times ridden behind Ironbar to Newport, so many times that every man, woman and child knew his name.

'I Feel as Though I Could Die,' Sobs Mary Phagan's Sister

Among all the hearts that are bowed down in sorrow over the murder of Mary Phagan, the 14-year-old factory child found dead in the National Pencil factory Saturday, there is none who feels the suffering and the anguish of the separation so keenly as her sister, Ollie, 18 years old, her companion since childhood.

For with her it is the suffering of youth, when the rose-veil of life has been lifted to show its tragic and terrible side in all its fullness for the first time. And it is all the more pitiful for her because it is the kind of suffering that brings to one that sense of despair and a later sadness that makes the whole world seem never quite the same again, no matter what happens. Something of its sweetness and joy has gone out to stay.

"Oh, I am so lonely without her," the young girl told a Georgian reporter as the tears fell down her face unheeded. She was at her little home on Lindsay Street. "Mary and I were always together and we always told each other everything. We slept in the same bed at night; we had ever since we were little bit of kids; and we always talked after the lights were out. There wasn't a thing that Mary wouldn't tell me, and I would always advise her and tell her what I thought was right if little questions would come up between us. She was always such a good little thing, nobody could help loving her!"

She clasped and unclasped her hands in front of her as though she did not know what to do, and leaned upon the bureau as if she were tired.

"I Never Had But One Sister."

"I don't know what I'm going to do—I haven't got anybody now," she said. "I never had but one sister, and she's gone."

Her voice choked and she could not go on for a time. When she did it was to speak of how she was in Marietta when the tragedy happened and how the news came home to her mother on Sunday morning. She had not been home to go to the poor little body in the undertakers' parlors shortly after it was taken there.

"The first mother knew of it all was a little before 5 o'clock Sunday morning," she said, her lips quivering. "A girl named Helen Ferguson, who lives near here and who has a telephone, was called up by Grace Hicks, the girl who identified Mary's body. Grace told her to come right on over and tell mother what had happened."

Saturday night when Mary hadn't come home they had all been worried. Mary had said she was coming right back after the parade, but didn't show up. Then somebody remembered she had said she had heard the show at the Bijou was good—some of the girls had told her—and she would like to go, but she wouldn't go without she had some one to go with her. When she didn't come home a little later they all thought maybe she had found some of the girls anyway and gone, and so Mr. Coleman, her stepfather, went downtown to bring her home. He waited until the show was over and everybody had filed out of the theater, but Mary was not with the crowd. Mr. Coleman had returned home and found Mrs. Coleman and another woman, who had stayed with her while he had gone to town, still up and waiting for him. Then was when they decided that Mary had met up with her aunt from Marietta and gone home with her. She had intended going away Sunday.

"But I know Mary's safe," said Mrs. Coleman, and after a few minutes they all went to bed.

The Awful News.

BRYAN FAILS TO CURB MOVE FOR ANTI-JAP BILL

California Legislators Demand That Nippon State Specifically Its Objections to Measure.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., April 29.—Sentiment to-day in the California Legislature favored the adoption of an anti-alien land bill similar to the one that brought Secretary of State Bryan scurrying across the continent. Legislators are disappointed at the statement from Bryan. They believed he would disclose the diplomatic expressions that had passed between the United States and Japan. When they found he merely desired to amplify the statement wired Governor Johnson there was distinct disappointment.

"Be specific" is the demand heard on every hand. If there were actual objection to the land bill as proposed, the legislators feel they are entitled to know what that objection was, and they would like to see Japan tell the State Department what is objectionable, and that this statement be transmitted to the lawmakers.

The legislators point out that Japan made no protest against similar laws in other States. They say Mr. Bryan himself was evidently unaware of the passage of these laws, and want to know why Japan objects on diplomatic grounds in the case of California and not in other cases.

It was considered a certainty today that unless this answer was forthcoming the Legislature would not delay much longer. The lawmakers indicated they would consider any answer from Japan. Unless this objection is stronger than any representation now made, according to a majority leader, the bill will be passed.

International Law Expert Advises Wilson.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—President Wilson and John Bassett Moore, Acting Secretary of State, held an extended conference at the White House to-day to consider latest developments in the California-Japanese situation. The President plainly is worried by the alien bill complications. Acting Secretary Moore was called to the executive mansion because of his extensive knowledge of international law. While the administration does not hope for a settlement entirely satisfactory to Japan and while President Wilson is certain the entire situation is a plot to embarrass him, the President will do everything possible to obtain the passage of a denatured alien land law bill.

California Not Bound By Treaty, Says Works.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Asserting the right of California to enact laws prohibiting aliens from holding lands, Senator Works, of California, in a statement to-day said if the National Government makes a treaty infringing upon this right the State is not bound thereby.

He suggests that the treaty obstructing the rights of the States be abrogated as one solution of the difficulty.

Senator Works' statement follows: Every State in the Union has the right to protect its territory. It shall hold and own lands within the State and to except aliens from that right. A number of the States have already done so. The National Government has no right to enact any law or make any treaty that will deny or impair that right on the part of a State.

Therefore, the Governor and the Legislature of the State of California are strictly within their rights when they insist upon enacting an alien law, whether it excludes civilians of all or only of one foreign nation. If the National Government has made a treaty which infringes upon these rights, the State is not bound by it and may enact such a law notwithstanding. On the other hand, the President is strictly within his rights in endeavoring to persuade the State to waive its rights and respect a treaty made with a foreign nation.

But neither our Government nor a foreign nation has any right to coerce a State to prevent lawful legislation by it, and no self-respecting State could submit to any such coercion or dictation from either source.

The people of the country and the Japanese Government may just as well understand once for all that such subjects of that nation as are coming to California are extremely objectionable to our people, and that their permanent ownership of land in the State will not be allowed.

Mrs. Wilson Cheers Dying Consumptive

President's Wife Takes Flowers to Lad in Poor District of Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The sympathy and charity of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson were illustrated a few days ago by her journeying from the White House to the bedside of a poor boy who is dying of tuberculosis.

Dr. Gary Grayson, naval surgeon and aide to the President who spent spare moments caring for the sick poor, told the President's wife of a particularly distressing case.

Mrs. Wilson was touched. Collecting a bunch of spring flowers from the garden, she accompanied Dr. Grayson in a White House automobile to the home of the unfortunate lad in the poor district of the national capital.

Commits Hari Kari Over Jap Alien Bill

Chicago Oriental's Suicidal Protest Follows Bryan's Visit on Way to California.

CHICAGO, April 29.—A Chicago coroner's jury to-day got its first introduction to hari kari, when it was called upon to render a verdict on the suicide of Lar Kie Kum, a young Japanese who ended his life as a protest against the proposed California anti-alien land law.

For several days before his death Lar Kie Kum every day bought every edition of every newspaper issued in Chicago, and read every word of the dispatches from Sacramento and Washington.

On the day Secretary Bryan was in Chicago on his way to California the young Japanese would give several years of his life for a talk with Bryan.

Declares American Children Snobbish

Mrs. Adelaide S. Lean Tells Why She Educates Girls in Paris Instead of United States.

NEW YORK, April 29.—"The children of this country of the well-to-do classes are imbued, almost from the cradle, with the spirit of snobbishness. The education of the child is not as yet on a proper basis in this country. That is why my two girls are being brought up in Paris and will remain there until they are sixteen."

Mrs. Adelaide Starr Lean, who has lived in Paris for the last five years, made this statement at the Waldorf-Astoria. She continued:

"My girls began to talk about 'society.' There were dances and parties every day, so I took them to Europe. They are taught there the things they really need most—manners and languages."

EASY WAY TO GET RID OF PIMPLES

Resinol Really Does What Cosmetics are Supposed to Do.

It is so easy to get rid of pimples and blackheads with Resinol, and it costs so little, too, that anyone whose face is disfigured by these pests is foolish to keep on with useless creams, washes or complicated "beauty treatments." Here's the way to do it:

Bathe your face for several minutes with Resinol Soap and hot water, then apply a little Resinol Ointment very gently. Let this stay on ten minutes, and wash off with Resinol Soap and more hot water, finishing with a dash of cold water to close the pores. Do this every morning and evening, and you will be surprised to see how quickly the healing, antiseptic Resinol balsams soothe and cleanse every pore, leaving the complexion clear and velvety.

Resinol positively stops itching instantly and speedsily heals eczema, and other skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Sold by every druggist. Resinol Ointment in ointment jars, 50 cents and $1.00. Resinol Soap, 25 cents. For generous free trial, write Dept. 14-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Ban on Immigrants Called Too Severe

Congressmen Threaten to Press Investigation of Secretary Wilson's Enforcement of Laws.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Several members of Congress, who declined to discuss the matter for publication, to-day complained of the rigorous manner in which the immigration laws are being enforced by Secretary of Labor Wilson.

They said they might press an investigation of the Secretary's conduct by Congress. One member declared he had unsuccessfully appealed to the department in the case of over a half dozen aliens who were ordered deported because of trivial physical defects.

"Watching Baseball Games Is Harmful"

Play Furnishes Too Much Excitement for Spectators, Says Dr. Sargent, of Harvard.

CAMBRIDGE, April 29.—Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, Harvard's expert on physical culture, said to-day: "The excitement attending baseball games is harmful. Thousands of men and boys and even women become unduly excited over the athletic prowess of professional players. There is nothing wrong with a ball game as such any more than there is with a theatrical performance as such, but such games arouse emotion without furnishing a motor outlet. We are overdoing one phase of the so-called love of sport."

SELMA DRUGGIST HELD FOR DEATH OF HIS WIFE

SELMA, ALA., April 29.—The coroner's jury has returned a verdict that the death of Mrs. J. D. Summers was caused by violence inflicted by her husband, Dr. J. D. Summers, an East Selma druggist.

Friends of the druggist maintain that while both were intoxicated in their apartments over the drug store the woman fell from the second floor.

SEEK CLEW IN QUEER WORDS IN ODD NOTES

Who Would Be the Most Interested in Saying That the Night Watchman Did Not Do It?

While the tendency of the police straight-through has seemed to be to doubt that Mary Phagan, the murdered girl, really wrote the small notes found beside her body purporting to give a clew to her murderer, the girl's stepfather, W. J. Coleman, thinks it possible that she may have written one of the scrawls.

That one is the note written on the little yellow factory slip—so faintly traced it is almost impossible to read it. It is the one that says: "mama that negro hired down here did this. I want to get water and he pushed me down this hole a long tall negro black that has it woke long lean tall negro I write while play with me."

"Somehow, it looks like her handwriting to me," said Mr. Coleman. "But, of course, I can not be sure. Now, about the other note I am doubtful. It seems to be written too well for the child to have done it. It is the almost insensible condition she must have been in at the time. Whether she wrote either of the notes of her own accord, though, or whether she was forced to do it by her murderer to turn suspicion from himself, of course is mere speculation. Only time can tell, if anything."

Doubts Other Note's Authorship.
The other note whose authorship Mr. Coleman doubts is the one scrawled on a notepad. It reads as it was at first translated:

"He said he wood love me laid down like the night watch did it but that long tall black negro did it by his self."

This note, however, brings up an argument advanced by several people who have studied it carefully. They have found that in some way one word, "play," was omitted in the first translation, and they think that instead of "night watch" the words were meant to mean "night watch," which is relative to the subject. With these changes the note would read:

"He said he wood love me laid down play like the night watch did it, but that long tall black negro did it by his self."

They ask: If the murderer told the child he was going to "play like the night watch did it," and then the child goes on to explain that it wasn't the night watchman at all that did it, but another negro, wouldn't that appear that the child was endeavoring to shield the night watchman?

Argue Against Watchman.
They also ask: Would a child in the predicament Mary Phagan was supposed to be in, insensible and her mind wandering, be thinking of trying to shield a night watchman in her notes, even before she described the man who had treated her so cruelly?

Again they ask: Who would be the most interested person in the world in saving the hide of the night watchman?

Did the child write the notes herself, was she forced to write them, or did somebody else write them? The notes are written to throw sus-

1 Dead, 2 Dying, in Augusta Accidents

Fireman Crushed to Death, Girl Hit by Auto and Boy Fractured Skull in Fall.

AUGUSTA, GA., April 29.—One man is dead and a young woman and a boy are dying as the result of a series of accidents in Augusta last night.

Pat Callahan, a fireman, was run over and crushed to death by a fire truck. He swung on the wagon as it left to answer a call, and, falling, went directly beneath the wheels.

Miss Ernestine Batey was run over by an automobile driven by Mrs. W. K. Hagler. Her skull was fractured. Miss Batey is a niece of Mrs. Asa G. Chandler, of Atlanta.

Clifford Carper, aged 19, suffered a fractured skull in falling down the steps at the playgrounds of the John Milledge School.

GARRISON MOVES TO RID THE ARMY OF POLITICS

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Secretary Garrison has issued an order to put an end to appeals to him for favored treatment of individual officers of the army and to stop political "influence." According to the order any communication made to the War Department outside the regular military channels for favored treatment of an officer in any way, will promptly be referred to that officer. He will be required to report to the Secretary whether he is responsible for such requests.

MRS. J. W. COLEMAN, below, mother of slain Mary Phagan, and Ollie Phagan, sister of the murdered girl. Mrs. Coleman is prostrated by grief over the crime, and warns all mothers of working girls to watch carefully their loved ones.

Make Your Letters Help Bring Shrine

Everybody Urged to Use Reminder of Atlanta's Conquest for Convention on Every Missive.

Everyone who writes a letter can help Atlanta to win the honor of entertaining the next Imperial Council of the Mystic Shrine.

Fred Houser, secretary of the convention bureau, tells how.

Across the bottom of the last sheet say:

"Atlanta, 1914, Imperial Council Shrine."

Business firms are requested to have this printed on the stationery they will use for the next month, or else have it typewritten at the end of every letter. The man who really wants to help can have the same inscription on the envelopes.

In this way thousands upon thousands of reminders will be sent to influential quarters which could be reached in no other way.

Fifteen thousand cards, reading simply "Atlanta, 1914," will be distributed at Dallas next month when the shrine meets there.

picion off of the night watchman. Translated in that way, the argument would go to bear out the expressed belief of the girl's stepfather that she negro committed the crime. Ollie Phagan, the 18-year-old sister of Mary, said that, while she did not know, of course, she did not believe that Mary wrote either of the notes. She knew her handwriting well, and the rough letters did not look like hers, although they might possibly be.

Excitement prevailed to-day among those interested when it was found that the scene in which the fearful struggle between the dead girl and her assailant took place was not on the second floor of the pencil factory, as it was thought, where a few strands of her hair were found in the cogs of a steel lathe, but in the dressing room of the place. This was made certain by a search of the floor of the room, and a rag of her dress that was found up and which showed that it had been used to gag her. The strip was of silk, and had been cut with a knife from the front of her lavender dress, which was new, and which the child was wearing for the first time.

It was said that the discovery was made by some of the girls employed at the factory, who slipped under the blood which, in one place, had formed a small pool. They ran out excited by the appearance of the place. The dead girl's hair had only caught in the steel lathe when her murderer had dragged her by it.

This would go to corroborate the belief of several persons acquainted with the tragedy's various angles that Mary Phagan never left the building, or at least only for a short while from the time she entered it to get money Saturday until her lifeless form was picked up and carried from the basement by the authorities. They say the might have either been accidentally locked in, or purposely taken back in the building by her murderer, who obtained entrance either by a key or went in by prying open a staple from an alley door.

Logic Involves Negro.

In either instance, the assailant had been keeping close tab on her actions, and either procured a key for himself to go in, or bribed the watchman to pass him. This would also bear out their insistence that the negro Newt Lee, in jail, knows more than he pretends to about the tragedy. Certain it is that it seems strange, it is argued, that if a lively stable man next door to the factory could hear the girl screaming at midnight, any one in the building could have heard cries very clearly, unless he was asleep or away from his post, which the watchman does not claim he was. The lively stable man had paid no attention to the cries, as he thought it was negroes, cursing. The dead girl's sister said that the child's mignon handbag, which was of silver and which has not yet been found, did not contain any valuables and she had very little money to it. When she had started off to town Mary had told her mother she needed only a dime—that she was going to get her pay and wouldn't want any more. Her hair ribbon and other little belongings, along with her parasol, the child's sister had also seen and recognized.

WHY PREMATURE GRAY HAIR?

There are many causes of premature gray hair—sickness, a nervous temperament, impoverished blood, deficient scalp nutrition, sometimes it is hereditary and the daughter finds herself quite gray in her early thirties. We don't always know the cause, but we do know that gray hair adds at least ten years to the age of a woman, be she old or young, and when a young woman's hair begins to fade and lose its color, it is very foolish for her to let it go on unheeded. In a year or two she will be an old gray-headed woman. And just a little care and treatment can save her hair and her youth.

Our Robinnaire Hair Dye is not a vulgar bleach or artificial coloring for the hair. It is a pure, scientific preparation of tonic virtue which restores your hair to its own natural color and beautiful, healthy condition. If your hair is losing its life and color, there is no reason at all why you should hesitate to use this pure restorative, any more than that you should refuse to use a cure for dandruff. The fading gray hair and the dandruff both result from scalp diseases and both should be treated.

Robinnaire's Hair Dye we make in our own laboratory and personally guarantee it to be pure and harmless. Non-sticky and does not stain skin or scalp. Use it at once if your hair is turning gray, and you will be wondrously surprised and pleased at the result. Retain your youth as long as you can, because when it slips away you never can get it back.

Prepared for light, medium and dark brown and black hair. Trial size, 25c; postpaid 31c. Regular large size, 75c; postpaid 83c. For sale by all "Jacobs" Pharmacy Stores and druggists generally.

This Pony Contest Will Be a Lively One

The first contestants entered in the American-Georgian Pony Outfit Contest made it clear that there is to be no lack of interest. "We intend to win," was the slogan that accompanied nomination blanks received all day yesterday.

Any white boy or girl can enter this contest, whether living in Atlanta or the out-of-town territory that the Georgian and Sunday American are sold in.

The plan for distribution of prizes and the contest rules published yesterday will appear again to-morrow. Every contestant should read them carefully.

Subscription blanks and printed instructions for the use of contestants will be ready within a few days. For the information of those who want to begin work at once we publish the following:

PLAN PURCHASE OF BROOKHAVEN LAND FOR CLUB

Capital City Members Authorize Committee to Buy Estates for Country Organization.

Negotiations are on between the Capital City Club and realty men that will lead to the purchase of the Brookhaven estates for the establishment of a country club as an adjunct of the downtown organization. Authority to make the purchase was given last night at the annual meeting of the club. A special committee was authorized, to be appointed by President R. F. Maddox, to take up finally the details of the purchase, in connection with the finance committee. Negotiations will hinge on the price. John E. Murphy, member of the Capital City Club, said to-day the owners of the Brookhaven estates will be asked to reduce their demands—in round figures, about $100,000. The overwhelming vote by club members in favor of purchasing the country property is considered evidence of the desire for the double establishment. The plans provide for the maintenance of the country club by the downtown club, but with separate officers. The Brookhaven estates include a handsome club house, located picturesquely in a tract of about 150 acres, upon which is a fine nine-hole golf course. It is proposed to lay out an eighteen-hole course and otherwise amplify the club grounds arrangements. It is the opinion of the business men of the Capital City Club that they may reserve 50 acres and sell it eventually for enough to pay for the entire property at its present price.

Policeman Accused As Bandit Leader

Confessed Robbers Say Officer Walked Beat by Night, Planned Crime by Day.

CHICAGO, April 29.—In a cell at the county jail to-day, Policeman William H. Ohm denied that he was the chief of a gang of robbers that worked in Chicago all of last winter. Ohm was the "brains" and silent leader of a gang of seven burglars and highwaymen, according to confessions of three of the men who said they were members of the gang. Ohm, according to the three highwaymen, walked his beat at night, and in the daytime planned and ordered the robbery of places and pedestrians in his district.

MISS GORDON AGAIN HEADS CHILD LABOR CONFERENCE

MERIDIAN, MISS., April 29.—The child labor conference, in session here to-day re-elected Miss Jean M. Gordon, of Chicago, in deciding Mrs. Nellie McCalley had no legal complaint against Miss Anna O'Rourke of the flat above.

YOU CAN DO AS YOU LIKE IN YOUR OWN FLAT.—A person's flat is his own castle. If he wants to sing and play ragtime all night it's his own business. So ruled Judge Gemmill, of Chicago, in deciding Mrs. Nellie McCalley had no legal complaint against Miss Anna O'Rourke of the flat above.

ARM CUT OFF AND HE DIDN'T KNOW IT.—While searching John Bergstrom for weapons after arresting him for disorderly conduct, policemen at the Hammond, Ind., prison found the prisoner's right arm had been cut off. Bergstrom had not missed it, and could not account for the accident.

MONEY DOESN'T TALK IN THIS COURT.—A remark that money might make the road to divorce easier was regretted to-day by Eugene Bauchwitz, a divorce litigant in a Chicago court. "May be if I had a million dollars I might get a divorce," said Bauchwitz when the court refused his application for a decree. "Thirty days in jail," said Judge Pettit.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

Find Honesty Is Best Policy.

"Sheriff John Quinn," said a lawyer who has just returned from Boston, "is an old friend of mine, and while I was in his town the other day I called on him at the Charles Street jail. In the course of our conversation, he told me this story:

"One of the inmates of the jail accused the sheriff not long ago with the statement that he had found a $10 bill in the prison yard.

"Why didn't you keep the money?" asked the Sheriff.

"I didn't want to take what didn't belong to me," came the ready response.

"What are you in here for?" then asked "Honest John."

"Larceny," answered the prisoner. "BUT I DID NOT PLEAD GUILTY," he added.

When his term of imprisonment ended this week, and due to the fact that no claimant for the $10 had appeared, Sheriff Quinn gave the finder the money.

She Wanted to Have Corsets Fitted.

In a city not a million miles from Atlanta there is a young bachelor whose given name is Chandler and whose last name, for convenience sake, shall be Blank. Mr. Chandler Blank occupies luxurious apartments in one of the fashionable hotels. In the same town there is a man who runs a store which sells women's wearing apparel. His name is Chandler, too. Only that is his last name. Well, the other day Mr. Chandler Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm of Germany is very kind to the poor, his latest effort in their behalf being his arrangement to take one hundred poor children from the schools of Berlin for a three weeks' stay at the seashore. He is to defray all expenses from the profits of a book he has written, and the happy youngsters are to be sheltered in the quarters of his army regiment.

Blank, the bachelor, was called up on his phone by a sweet feminine voice.

"Hello," said Mr. Blank.

"Is this 'Chandler'?" said the unknown from the other end of the wire.

"I am the man," admitted Blank.

"If you come downtown to-morrow about 10 o'clock, will you be able to fit a pair of corsets on me?"

"What?" gasped Blank into the receiver.

"Would you please fit—?"

"What do you take me for?" demanded Blank as soon as he recovered his breath.

"Why, you are Chandler's, aren't you? You said you were."

Mr. Chandler Blank hung up the receiver quickly.

Kaiser Enjoyed 'Bob' Evans' Joke.

A good many stories have been told about "Fighting Bob" Evans. Here's one as related by Rear Admiral William Swift, former commandant of the Charleston Navy Yard, and which was repeated the other evening at the Capital City Club by a member who has known Admiral Swift for many years.

Swift was the executive officer of the cruiser New York at the time she represented the United States at the opening of the Kiel Canal. "Fighting Bob" was her captain, and the story concerns him and Emperor William. The German war lord, accompanied by a small retinue, was dining with Captain Evans on board the New York.

"Yo Majesty," said he, "we are a very simple people, and if there is anything you'd like better than the rest, do not stand on ceremony, but let George give you another portion."

"George, an ex-slave, had been Evans' servant from boyhood, and was the only attendant at the meal. The Emperor asked George for another portion of ham, which happened to be from Virginia mast-fed hog and was very fine. That disposed of a third portion was asked for, and as the royal guest was being served, Evans remarked:

"Yo Majesty, if I were a diplomat instead of a sailor man, I would take this occasion to broach the subject of German restriction on American pork."

The look of dismay that covered the faces of the Emperor's retinue gave way to smiles when the war lord gave a shout of laughter that was heard from stoke hole to fighting top."

Unemployed Show Big Decrease in 1912

Building, Transportation and Metal Trades Alone Produce the Most Idleness Among Workmen.

NEW YORK, April 29.—The percentage of men out of work last year, as compared with previous years, is considerably reduced, according to monthly returns furnished to the New York Bureau of Labor Statistics by trade unions.

At the end of December the percentage was 23.1, as compared with 21.9 in 1911 and 20.7 in 1910. The building, transportation and metal trades showed the highest proportion of idleness.

This was due, however, to a later opening than usual of the busy season and to labor disputes in December.

GERMAN PRINCE AIDS CHILDREN OF POOR

J. D. BAGWELL AND M'CLELLAND GETS MISS ECKERT WED PROBE SUBPENA

Former General Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. Bride of Business College Man.

Miss Daisy Eckert, who resigned as general secretary of the local Y. W. C. A. April 15, was married to-day to J. O. Bagwell, of the Bagwell Business College, in Atlanta, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Woods White, 32 Howard Street, Rev. Charles Daniels officiating.

Miss Eckert, incidentally, demonstrated the fact that a woman—one woman, anyway—can keep a secret, if she makes up her mind, even though it is a secret so sweetly delicious as her own wedding day and the name of the lucky man.

Several weeks ago, when the rumor first went abroad that she was contemplating matrimony, wily friends and associates undertook to get from her the name of her intended and the wedding date.

Miss Eckert did not deny the soft impeachment within the rumor, but "some time before the summer is over, perhaps," was all she would venture.

She had heard, for one thing, that a conspiracy was on foot to make trouble for the darling male person who came a-wooing Miss Daisy with intent to take her away from the Y. W. C. A. Maybe it was that and maybe it was something else. Whatever it was, she kept it, and it only became known to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. White tendered Mr. and Mrs. Bagwell a delightful luncheon after the wedding.

Everybody wishes the bride—and, oh, well, the groom, too—long life and a deal of happiness.

Expose Threatened By Resort Owners

Woman Tells Vice Probers She Will Give Names of Legislators if Forced to Testify.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., April 29.—In preparation for possible trouble when the Illinois Senate white slave committee resumes its hearing here to-night, Lieutenant Governor O'Hara to-day ordered ten extra sergeants-at-arms to prevent anyone entering the committee rooms who has not been asked to testify.

A report was widely circulated that a woman had been called to testify and she replied that if she were compelled to appear before the committee she would disclose the names of 50 or more legislators who have spent time and money in her resort. She was not called.

HOME-LONGING CAUSED FLIGHT OF MISS BORDEN

'I Wanted My Mother and Father,' Declares Millionaire's Daughter, Thought Kidnaped.

NEW YORK, April 29.—A cry of a lonely girl for a mother, a father and a home came to-day from Miss Ramona Borden, 17-year-old runaway daughter of Gail Borden, who planned for the first time why she left a sanitarium near Pompton, Lake, N. J., a week ago, giving the impression that she had been kidnaped.

"For four years I have lived in hotels," said Miss Borden, "with a sanitarium in between. I wanted my home, my mother, my father, the open air and dogs and horses as other girls have."

"I am going back to Los Angeles with my mother, and I feel that I shall be happier, although I would be far happier if my father and mother were together."

Although not divorced, Mr. and Mrs. Borden have not lived together for three years. Mrs. Borden's suit failed.

"I did not run away because I was in love," cried Miss Borden. "There is no man in my life, although I hope to be married some day."

Miss Borden exonerated Mrs. Helen White, wife of a Cleveland millionaire, from the "kidnaping" charge. She said she wrote to her mother to take her from the sanitarium where she had been placed by her father, but because of impatience, wrote to Mrs. White to help her. She did not give the appearance of being ill.

"This is the second time I have run away, and I hope it will be the last," concluded the young heiress with a laugh.

Savannah Society Hears Opera Stars

Music Festival Opened by Metropolitan Singers—Although Still Talking of Atlanta.

SAVANNAH, GA., April 29.—The Savannah Music Festival opened last night with a concert program. Members of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who are to sing, have been arriving for several days. Mme. Louise Homer was the first to arrive. The others had a special train operated over the Southern and came in late in the evening.

Miss Anna Case has made a distinct impression by the simple democracy of her manner. Paul Altmeppen also has made a hit by his frank and boyish ways, and talks incessantly about an exciting game of baseball he witnessed in Atlanta. He admits that he likes "rag" music, and plays it. He says the time will never come when only "high-brow" music will be appreciated by all the people.

The best society in Savannah occupied boxes at the concert last night, when three stars were on the program as soloists.

Chinese Democrats Fight Foreign Loan

Cancellation Demanded by Faction That Would Have New Republic Control Its Own Finances.

SPECIAL Cable To The Atlanta Georgian. PEKING, CHINA, April 29.—The signing of the quintuple loan for $125,000,000 has caused a grave political crisis. The Kuo Min Tang (or Democratic party) demands the cancellation of the contract, contending that it contravenes China's sovereign rights in giving foreigners power to supervise the nation's finances. It also objects because the matter was not referred to the present assembly for approval.

The Government contends that this was not necessary, as the loan agreement is practically the same as that approved by the provisional government assembly December 30 last. Chang Chi, president of the assembly, has telegraphed to all the provincial assemblies urging them not to sanction the loan.

GIVE THE HAIR THE FOOD IT NEEDS

Parisian Sage Soaks In At Once. Feeds, Cleanses and Makes Hair Grow.

What a delight to have a beautiful head of hair, fluffy, lustrous, abundant and free from dandruff. Hair is a plant and your head is a garden—a little cultivation works wonders. If the hair is too dry it needs freshening up. If it begins to get thin it needs fertilizing.

Parisian Sage is a scientifically made preparation that gives the hair just what it lacks to make it soft, luxuriant, abundant and radiant with life. It removes dandruff immediately and cleanses the hair of dirt and excessive oils. It is perfectly harmless.

Parisian Sage is a tea-colored liquid, not sticky or greasy—delicately perfumed, that comes in fifty cent bottles at the druggists and toilet counters. The "Girl with the Auburn Hair" on the package.

The very first application will astonish you—if used daily for a week you will be delighted with the improvement it has made in your hair and scalp.

You run no risk as we guarantee to refund the money if you are not perfectly satisfied—a safe offer on our part. Delighted users of Parisian Sage all over the country write us enthusiastically about it. They pronounce it a rare and wonderful hair dressing.

COLLEGE HEAD REPROVED FOR RAP OF FAITHS

Poteat Is Halted in Attack on Jews and Catholics in Sociological Congress.

Delegates to the Southern Sociological Congress to-day declared the but last night placed on denominational attacks at the meeting in the Wesley Memorial Church meant a greater usefulness for the work of the congress.

Dr. E. M. Poteat, of Furman University, Greenville, S. C., had launched into bitter denunciation of Catholics and Jews when Dr. A. J. McKelway, acting president, interrupted him. The audience cheered. Dr. Poteat ended his speech on "National Stewardship" with a few more sentences.

Dr. Poteat was the last speaker, and when he arose he asked if the audience would rather listen to his speech or go home to sleep. The crowd urged him to proceed. Soon he was discussing the Jews.

Scores the Hebrews.
"They have failed in their stewardship," he said. "The Protestants have been making the real progress."
Then he turned to the Catholics, saying:

"We must rise up and say that no church with its head abroad shall gain dominion in this country. It must not be allowed.

"I don't see why a red cap on a man's head adds any sense to his brain."

Dr. McKelway interrupted.
"Pardon me, but there can be no discussion along denominational lines," he said.

Audience Cheers McKelway.
Dr. Poteat thanked him. The audience burst into applause.

Dr. McKelway said all denominations were welcomed in the work of the congress for human welfare, and he interrupted because he feared offense might be taken at Dr. Poteat's remarks.

Several Catholic priests—Father
Rajder, of Atlanta; Father Peter A.
Crumbly, of Memphis, and Father DuBois, of Marist College—have taken prominent parts in this session of the congress.

Record Winter Yam Yield.
COLUMBUS.—A. A. Hendry, a farmer at Adel, in Marion County, brought a carload of sweet potatoes to Columbus to-day. The car contained 12,208 pounds of potatoes. The potatoes were bedded last November.
They yielded more than 1,000 bushels on 40 acres.

MRS. SEVERINA SAM-ARELLI, of New York, divorced from the husband who called her a "kissless bride."

Aged Man Held for Attack.

DALTON.—Andrew Summey, an aged Murray County man, is in jail in Spring Place on the charge of assault with intent to murder. The victim of the assault, Tom A. Ensley, is in a precarious condition. It is alleged that the men engaged in a quarrel because of the failure of Summey's son to report to Ensley for work after he had been employed in a tale mine over which Ensley was superintendent.

'KISSLESS BRIDE' WAS LOVING ONE

"Rose of Palermo" Gets Verdict in Suit Brought in New York
by Her Husband.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Supreme Court Justice Gerard has handed down a decision declaring that Mrs.
Severina Samarelli, famous as the "Kissless Bride," is not kissless.

In this decree he brands as baseless her husband's charge that his beautiful bride turned her head away whenever he offered to caress or kiss her. Against the protest of Dr. Gaetano F. Samarelli, the husband, Justice Gerard decreed that Mrs. Samarelli is entitled to a separation and alimony. He will fix the amount of her allowance next week.

"Liked to Be Kissed."
Here is the judicial finding concerning Dr. Samarelli's allegation that his wife was "marble-hearted":

Ever since the marriage Mrs. Samarelli has treated her husband in an affectionate and kind manner. She has kissed, hugged and embraced him continually.
She liked to be kissed, hugged and embraced by her husband, and has at all times been affectionate and kind to him.
The Court reviewed the evidence which showed that Dr. Samarelli and his bride, who was known as "The Rose of Palermo," went to Niagara Falls and Canada on their honeymoon. On their return he installed his sister and brother-in-law in the bridal chamber of his house, and a few days later told his wife he was through with her.

Called Her Cold.
He said he had done these things because his bride was cold and indifferent. He said she shut herself in her mother's apartment and refused to greet him with affection.
The Court holds he was at fault in abandoning his wife and refusing her attempts to be reconciled.

Dr. Samarelli started an annulment action, but discontinued it before trial. It is said that he may take an appeal from Justice Ger-ard's decision.

Knights Templars Meet.

COLUMBUS.—The fifty-third annual convocation of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templars of Alabama, will convene in Dothan May 14 and remain in session two days.
Phenix City and Girard will be well represented.

Pinedale Tunnel Abandoned.

COLUMBUS.—The Pinedale tunnel, near Warm Springs, which has given the Southern Railway officials so much trouble for the past several years, has been cut out, the finishing touches now being in progress. The cut in the deepest place is 86 feet.

LAUNDERERS OF 3 STATES MEET HERE

"Parcel Post" Subject for Discussion at First Day's Session of Delegates.

Laundrymen of three States are in Atlanta holding their seventh annual convention, which will continue through to-morrow. They are from South Carolina, North Carolina and Georgia, and number several hundred.

The first session was featured by a welcome address by Mayor James C. Woodward, a response by A. W.
Solomon, of Savannah, and addresses by E. B. Stanley, of Cincinnati, and W. W. Orr, of Atlanta.

This afternoon W. E. Fitch, secretary of the National Laundrymen's Association; Mr. Birch, of the Crane Company, Atlanta, and J. A. Nichols addressed the association on "Is the Parcel Post of Benefit to the Lau-dry?"

A barbecue at the Cold Springs Club to-morrow morning has been arranged by the local laundrymen. Tonight theater parties will be given at the Forsyth. To-morrow the delegates will make a tour of the city, inspecting local plants.

Officers of the Tri-State Association are: F. D. Letheo, Charlotte, president; Clare D. Heidler, Athens, first vice president; Arthur W. Solomon, Savannah, second vice president; H. A. Smith, Florence, S. C., secretary and treasurer.

No Flying on French Border, Says Kaiser

Hereafter Army Airmen Must Be Careful Not to Cavort Too Close to Frontier.

BERLIN, April 29.—The German War Office has issued an order forbidding army officers from engaging in any official or private balloon flights that would carry them near the French frontier.

The German Government is deeply chagrined by the two recent incidents, when German military aviators landed in France. The French managed to turn both the Lunelville and Arrancourt affairs into jokes, and it annoyed the Kaiser.

Macon Clubs Escape.

MACON.—The police committee of Council to-night will report adversely to Council on the resolution to close up the social and locker clubs on Sunday. The report probably will be adopted by Council by a vote of ten to two.

Soldiers to Camp at St. Simons.

MACON.—The Georgia Regiment will have its annual encampment at St. Simons Island in July. The Volunteers, Floyd Rifles and Hussars, of Macon, will take part in the encampment.

RAISE SHAFT TO GOV CANDLER'S MEMORY SOON

Monument, Paid for by Appointees, Will Be Unveiled at Gainesville, June 3.

By JAME B. NEVIN.

A handsome marble monument to the memory of the late Governor Allen D. Candler, the "one-eyed plow boy of Pigeon Roost," twice Chief Magistrate of Georgia, and three times a Representative in Congress, is to be unveiled in Gainesville on June 3, Jefferson Davis's birthday.

The stone will mark the late Governor's last resting place, and will be paid for by about one hundred of his appointees to office when occupying the executive chair of the State.

The idea was conceived by Pension Commissioner Lindsey, and his appeal to the former office holders under "Uncle Allen" was responded to re-gally and gladly. The sum of $300 was quickly raised, and with this a modest and fitting memorial will be secured.
—Just such as the late Governor himself would approve of, no doubt. It will be presented to Mrs. Candler on the birthday of the great Confederate chieftain, Davis, with simple and entirely unostentatious ceremony.

Governor Candler was one of the best beloved of the long and distinguished line of Georgia Chief Magistrates. He was a Democrat of the old school, and first came into prominence by defeating Judge Emory Speer, then an Independent Representative in the national Congress. It was during that fierce campaign that he earned the nickname that stuck to him ever thereafter—"The one-eyed plow boy of Pigeon Roost!"

This appellation was hurled at him in derision, but it acted as a boomerang upon those who launched it.
It very greatly endeared him to the masses of the plain people, with whom he ever was particularly strong in public life.

After serving three terms in Washington, Governor Candler was elected Secretary of State for Georgia and served in that office many years, until called to the Governorship. He was a plain, old-fashioned, outspoken sort of man, rugged in his honesty and uncompromising in his high ideals.
His portrait now adorns the wall of the Governor's reception room in the state capitol. This likeness, which is a fine one, shows in every line what manner of man he was.
Allen D. Candler was one of the most picturesque men who ever occupied the Governor's chair in Georgia, and one of the most genuinely popular. He was the last of Georgia's ex-Confederate Executives.

It is not generally known in Atlanta, although it is a fact, that Dr.
William M. Baird once was Speaker of the House of Representatives in the New Jersey Legislature and served one term in the early 70s with credit and distinction. He was affiliated with the Democratic side.

The doctor soon threw up politics, however, and took to medicine, which he found more interesting and suited his tastes. He has lived in Atlanta about 12 years.

Representative-elect Charles A. Pic-quet, of Richmond County, has returned home in Decatur for the summer session of the Legislature, and will motor to and from his legislative duties in Atlanta every day.

He will bring his family through the country from Augusta to Atlanta in a big seven-passenger car and expects to entertain considerably while sojourning in and near the capital.

Says The Montgomery Monitor:
"When a horse falls sick every passing man will suggest a sure-cure remedy to the owner. Before Gov.
John M. Slaton assumes the Governmental reins of Georgia he will have advice enough offered to last through the two terms that will probably be given him."

The Governor-elect is most courteous, kindly and considerate—those are reasons why he is so well liked by everybody. But he has not been patiently to much advice, he may be depended upon to accept such as pleases him and reject such as does not. He has a head of his own, all right.

The Southern Railway has done the only fair and square thing that is to be done in the matter of competiing with recently-enacted Georgia laws with reference to the abolition of the old-time general drinking cup used aboard trains, by deciding to furnish hereafter all passengers with individual sanitary drinking cups, to be thrown away after use.

The cups will be collapsible, made of oiled paper, and to be kept ready for the asking. All conductors will be supplied at once with a full supply of these cups for use on the trains.

It is expected that the other roads operating in Georgia will follow the Southern's lead in this matter. The law, which was perfected by the last Legislature, is very strict in its clauses prohibiting the use of a general drinking cup aboard trains.

A compulsory education law will be offered in the Georgia Legislature
when it assembles in June.

This matter has been proposed in the General Assembly more than once, but nothing so far has come of it.
This time, however, the proposition is to be more aggressively urged than it has been heretofore, and there is thought to be a fair chance of the passage of some sort of law bearing on the subject.

Heretofore, the attempted passage of child labor laws has more or less interfered with the passage of compulsory education laws. It is realized that the latter will become an immediate and absolute necessity, once satisfactory child labor laws are enacted, but it will be possible to pass more satisfactory and more intelligent compulsory education laws, perhaps, after the child labor laws are framed and approved.

As both measures will be agitated in the next Legislature, it looks as if the two propositions may be combined somewhere along the line, thus increasing the chances of success to

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

FINE BILL AT THE FORSYTH.
Keith vaudeville was transferred to the Forsyth last night and with it went the usual big Monday night crowd. The reward of the faithful "first-nighters" was a bill of exceptional merit.

Singing, dancing and feminine loveliness mark this week's offering. The last-named feature is given much prominence by extreme evening gowns, abbreviated skirts and scant drapery costumes.

Sophie Barnard and Lou Anger in a musical sketch which gives Miss Barnard opportunity to use her excellent voice and show a beautiful backless gown capture first honors. Anger scores heavily with her German dialect comedy. Muriel and Francis, a pair of attractive girls, make a big hit with new songs and dances. Curtis Richardson, a London music hall comedian, gets many laughs and repeated en-cores with his comedy and evening dancing. Gaby, posing in filmy drapery, wins favor with life portraits.

Other numbers are Burr and Hope,
an exceptionally clever comedy team;
Honor and LaTrance, acrobats, and Fattie Weekly.

"Billy the Kid" at Lyric.

"Billy the Kid," the rapid-fire success of the cow country, never shot himself into favor quicker in the Panhandle than "Billy the Kid," the Ly-ric's popular offering this week, did at that playhouse last night. Berkeley Haswell, fair-haired and boyish, scored heavily as the young desperado, turned from a careless lad into a terror of the border country by the villainy of his father. In addition to showing extreme ease in getting the drop on his enemies, the young star has a voice of no mean quality and knows how to use it. The play, a story of a boy who plenty of powder smoke, has some real pathos and comedy. Haswell, in the fair-trigger leag role, has good support in Robert Brooks, as his supposed father and later the manager of the Broken Heart saloon. James Dow-ell makes a fine blustering bad man and Edna Holloway's make-up as a dance hall girl gives a strong touch of realism. There are several stirring climaxes, notably the fight in the dark in the Broken Heart saloon.
"Billy" possesses what the "movie" wild West drama can at convey, the smell of powder smoke and rough voices. More than pleased the large opening audience.

"Butterfly on the Wheel" Pleases.

A splendid audience witnessed the premier of "A Butterfly on the Wheel," played by Miss Billy Long and her stock company at the Atlanta last night, and were pleased with its presentation.
The play is the old, old story of the butterfly wife, the professional man is too busy with the affairs of the world to be an ideal husband for such a wife and the serpent in the guise of a friend who loves too well, unwisely, and is not overwise in placing his affections or caring for the consequences.

The story is an absorbingly interesting and even if it is what is commonly termed a drawing room drama it affords tense scenes and thrilling incidents, and these make up much for the lack of action.

Miss Long proved splendidly versatile in her delineation of the thoughtless wife, who lived her life only in the present with no thought of the consequences. Following the totally different part of the widow in "Wildfire" of last week, her interpretation of the wife this week is also thoroughly enjoyable.

Allan Robinson, as Lord Ellerdine, a diplomat with no diplomacy, had some splendid lines and delivered them with all their effect and force—and, as the part is the only comedy character in the story, he soon became a favorite.

Others in the cast did well, and are due much credit for their splendid work.
Especially may this be emphasized when it is known that the parts were only finally cast last Thursday, due to a delay in securing the manuscript. Much of the changes in the cast or two spots in the work of last night may be forgiven when this is known, and one or two more performances will see this pass away.

There will be no performance Wednesday and Thursday nights, because of a previous house engagement, but the usual night performances the rest of the week and matinees Wednesday and Saturday will be given.

"Mr. 'Johnnie' Schofield, the comedian, relates an amusing story. A certain doctor had a patient. One day he came to the doctor in great trouble. During the night, he said, he had accidentally swallowed a mouse. The doctor told him to get a cat and some fried cheese and to lie on his back with his mouth open and the cheese on his nose. 'Then,' said the doctor, 'when the mouse smells the cheese he will come up for it, and the cat will then be able to catch it.' The man thanked him and went home. But the next day he was back again in worse trouble than ever. 'Well, did you do as I told you?' asked the doctor. 'Yes,' said the man, 'but while I was lying on my back I fell off to sleep. Now the cat is missing, and I'm afraid it has gone down' after the mouse."

Anecdotes by Famous People

NO one had a greater fund of short stories at her disposal than the late Lady Dorothy Nevill, and one in particular that she used to relate was of a very good-natured lady who was always helping a relative of hers who was very extravagant. Having one summer lent this feather-brained creature a considerable sum of money, what was her surprise at the end of the season to be applied to again in order that what were described as some pressing debts might be settled. "I am very sorry," said the kind-hearted lady, "but I can't possibly help you again just now. In order to lend you that money some time ago I was forced to go without a motor this season." "Dear me," was the reply, "if I had only known that I should have been delighted to have lent you mine."

A Lawyer's Story.
Mr. James T. Brady, a New York lawyer, tells this amusing story. When he first opened an office in New York he took a basement room which had been previously occupied by a cobbler. He was somewhat annoyed by the previous occupant's callousness, and irritated by the fact that he had few of his own. One day an Irishman entered. "The cobbler's gone," he said. "I should think he had," tartly responded Brady. "And what do you sell?" said the visitor, looking at the solitary table and a few law books. "Blockheads," responded Brady. "Begorra," said the Irishman, "ye must be doing a mighty fine business, ye ain't got but one left."

Edison's Story.
Mr. Thomas A. Edison was accepting blandly a reporter's apology for an error in a quotation. "Oh," Mr. Edison said, "I am rather well used to being misquoted. Electrical terms are always confusing to the lay mind. I wonder. Listen to this." Here Mr. Edison drew a telegram from his pocket. "I got this telegram from an assistant electrician this morning," he said. "Listen." And he read: "Wire with no outside outside. Put inside wire outside and outside inside. Need more outside for inside."

He Knew.
It was a party of visitors seeing the sights in Pittsburgh that finally entered the conservatory presented to the city by Mr. Phipps. The curator while showing them around was called away on business and left the visitors in charge of one of the clerks. They came to a beautiful statue which was admired immensely. It was of translucent marble. He pointed out the excellencies of the statue, told the name of the sculptor, and showed it from every viewpoint. One asked: "Alabaster, isn't it?" "No," he said, "Venus."

A Club Yarn.
The following good story was told not long ago at one of the Atlanta clubs: One or two young officers were dining together at a restaurant one night, and the conversation became a discussion on lies and lying generally, and finally there was a warm debate as to who was the biggest liar known to them. An old gentleman sitting at a table near was unable to avoid overhearing the discussion, and after a few minutes he rose and came over to their table. "I have just heard you decide, gentlemen," he said gravely, "that Lieutenant Arthur — is the biggest liar you have ever met. I am his father."

After a few seconds' embarrassed silence one of the young officers began to stammer apologies, but the old man waved them aside. "No, no," he said, "don't apologize; it's quite unnecessary. I was only going to say that if you regard my son Arthur as the biggest liar you have ever met you can not possibly have met my other son, Richard."

The Editor's Story.
A certain editor is credited with having related this story: He once ordered a story of a certain length and discovered the novelist had written several hundred words too many. In order to make the story fit the space at his disposal the last few paragraphs were condensed into a single sentence. This is the way it read: "Von Berken took a small glass of whiskey, his hat, his departure, no notice of his pursuers, a revolver out of his pocket, and finally his life."

Mr. Barrie's Best.
It is said of Mr. J. M. Barrie that he is rather shy and retiring in manner and one of the "most enjoyable social functions" he ever attended was, it is said, a dinner in which he turned to his neighbor and asked, "Do you converse?" "No, I don't," replied his neighbor. "Neither do I," said Mr. Barrie, comfortably.

Not To Be Believed.
Mr. "Johnnie" Schofield, the comedian, relates an amusing story. A certain doctor had a patient. One day he came to the doctor in great trouble. During the night, he said, he had accidentally swallowed a mouse. The doctor told him to get a cat and some fried cheese and to lie on his back with his mouth open and the cheese on his nose. "Then," said the doctor, "when the mouse smells the cheese he will come up for it, and the cat will then be able to catch it." The man thanked him and went home. But the next day he was back again in worse trouble than ever. "Well, did you do as I told you?" asked the doctor. "Yes," said the man, "but while I was lying on my back I fell off to sleep. Now the cat is missing, and I'm afraid it has gone down" after the mouse."

LOWRY ARNOLD GIVES OPINION ON BALL TRUST

By Lowry Arnold.
(Solicitor Criminal Court of Atlanta and Former Director of Atlanta Baseball Association.)

I HAVE been asked to give an opinion as to whether or not organized baseball is a trust. Although I am unable to give a positive answer to this question I will say that it certainly is a trust in effect and in fact. Whether it is a trust technically and legally could only be determined by Congress.

The legal definition of a trust is: "A corporation or combination of individuals under one head and which destroys competition."

Whether organized baseball destroys competition or not I cannot say. But this much is certain, all organized baseball clubs in this country are under an agreement with the National Commission which is headed by one man, Garry Hermann. This fact would tend to make it a trust.

Although the moguls might be able to stand an investigation of this sort they certainly would not welcome one. If such a course were taken Congress would at least limit the reserve clause and put a stop to the blacklisting of players who did not wish to sign a contract with any one particular club.

I BELIEVE that the proposed Government investigation was absolutely responsible for President N. W. of the Detroit club hurrying matters in the Cobb case and bringing it so readily to a satisfactory close.

IN my opinion the one remedy for all this trouble about players signing would be to limit the reserve clause to three years and at the end of this period give every man a chance to sign with whatever club he desired, providing, of course, that he had some plausible reason such as being with a tall club or among unpleasant surroundings, etc.

It is true that the best players on the poorer teams would flock to New York and the other big cities. Of course I believe that organization is absolutely essential to the life of the game, but I also believe that things could be arranged more satisfactorily to all parties if they would get together and fix up matters.

It does not seem fair that a man like Ty Cobb, who is without a doubt at the head of his profession, and who could easily have signed with the New York Giants for a number of other clubs for a $20,000 salary had been free, should be blacklisted by organized baseball for refusing to sign with Detroit.

ORGANIZED baseball could not exist without the reserve clause, but I believe that a limit of three years should be placed on it. Nap Rucker, of Brooklyn, is another notable instance of this restriction. How much better off he would be with a winning club. Surely he cannot be satisfied with his present surroundings, pitching few hit games and invariably losing through the lack of ability of his team mates.

The club owners have a one year reserve clause now, but if a player refuses to report the next year he is suspended, which amounts to the same thing as blacklisting. According to an agreement between all clubs he cannot be hired by any of them, so he is, in fact, an outcast unless he signs with his original team.

Perhaps the best remedy after all would be for Congress to investigate and decide once and for all whether or not organized baseball is a trust, or not organized baseball is a trust.

THERE is just one thing more I should like to add here, though it has no bearing whatever on the question I have been discussing. I wish to say that in my opinion the Southern League is the best organized and controlled of any league in the world. This is due to the great work done by President W. M. Kavanaugh, who has been at the head of the organization almost from the start. He has run the league with absolute fairness and has played no politics. He has been impartial in his dealings with the Atlanta club. The league owes much of its great success to Judge Kavanaugh.

OLDFIELD RESENTS BEING LINKED WITH SLAVE CASE

LOS ANGELES, April 29.—George H. Bixby, the Long Beach millionaire banker, is being probed by the grand jury to-day. Dick Hollingsworth and William Lacasse, prominent automobile men, have been arrested on a charge made by a fifteen-year-old girl, Barney Oldfield, the racing driver, appeared voluntarily before the grand jury and asked why his name had been connected with the investigation. He denied all knowledge of the girl witnesses.

ATTELL DEFEATS CHENEY
IN 15-ROUND BATTLE

BALTIMORE, MD., April 28.—Abe Attell, former featherweight champion, defeated George Cheney, of Baltimore, in a fifteen-round bout here last night. Abe needed all his cleverness to beat the local boy, as Cheney proved to be one of the toughest featherweights seen around these parts in some time.

The first few rounds of the contest were rather tame, but Attell started to force matters in the fifth and started piling up a lead. The boys weighed in at 124 pounds.

MATT BROCK KNOCKS OUT
O'KEEFE IN FOUR ROUNDS

AKRON, OHIO, April 29.—Matt Brock, the Cleveland lightweight, stopped Eddie O'Keefe, of Philadelphia, in the fourth round of a scheduled twelve-round battle here last night. O'Keefe was badly battered at the end, and never had a chance. A right uppercut to the jaw put the Philadelphia boy down and out. A large crowd witnessed the fray.

CORDELE TRIUMPHS OVER
COLUMBUS Y. M. C. A. TEAM

CORDELE, GA., April 29.—Cordele walked away with the Columbus Y. M. C. A. team this afternoon by the score of 15 to 1. Lattrell, for Columbus, was badly beaten, and numerous errors were made by the visiting team. Gillespie, for Cordele, pitched a splendid game.

Two of Bill Smith's Hurling Staff Are Reported Not to Be Training Very Faithfully

By W. S. Farnsworth.

WHEN a team has won a bunch of games and then hits a slump there are always a heap of fans who start roasting the players, collectively and individually. Right now Billy Smith's pitching staff is being put over the jumps.

Nevertheless, yours truly received some reliable info last night that two of the "Crackers" hurling staff are imbibing liquids stronger than coffee. If this is true the local manager had better get on the job and plaster a good heavy fine on the guilty ones.

MILT Reed, the former Marist boy, is sure pepping the old horsehide out in the Central Association and the St. Louis team is almost sure to haul him back into the big league ranks if he keeps up the pace. The following extract is from a Davenport paper:

"Milt Reed was the scintillating star of the afternoon. In four times up he reaped out three hits to the outfield. He demonstrated his speed on the paths by pilfering four bases. In the seventh after he had singled he stole both second and third. In the field he was a demon, too, handling six chances perfectly, and one of them was a miraculous one-handed stab of a vicious liner."

A ST. LOUIS scribe believes that he has unearthed the laziest man in the world—and he's a baseball operator, too. Said scribe prints the following under a Boston date line:

"First and last, various individuals have been exploited as worthy of places in any list of the 'Laziest Men on Earth.' I would humbly suggest that my genial friend and frequent co-laborer, George Warrum, be placed in any list of the 'Laziest Operators at the ball games.' He is accorded a position well up in the list. He duly qualified at one of last week's games, when, in order to save untold money on his own club, he telegraphed over to New York to ascertain the time."

A TINY monkie drove two of Frank Chance's Penman Aspiring Yankees to cover the other night in a Kay Gotham Hotel, where the P. A. Y's met when in the big village. Ray Keating and Jack Leivelt were the young men.

An Italian opera company registered at the hotel last Friday night, and one of the singers, who carried the pet monkie, was assigned to the room occupied by Leivelt and Keating by mistake.

Some of the other players stopping at the same hotel dropped around to see Leivelt and Keating. Neither was in sight, but the visitors started a poker game in their room. Ten minutes after the game had got under way there was an uproar of screeches and yells.

A corps of clerks, bellboys and brave guests rushed in to help the poker-playing element of the team. Keating and Leivelt were located in a closet, while the monkey was spied perched on the transom.

Oh, what a joshing these two young persons are in for all around the circuit!

"To grab the white heavyweight championship of the world and tote it back to that dear State of Oklahoma is the eight-horse power task that Carl Morris has mapped out for himself."

The above was printed in a Chicago paper.

Well Carl could sure tote it back to that dear Oklahoma if Gunboat Smith, Jess Willard and Luther McCarty could be induced to fake and lay down for him as did Jack McFarland and Jack Keating, alias Bob Williams, here in Atlanta and in Chattanooga.

HARRY Vardon and Edward Ray, who will be sent to this country by Lord Northcliffe, of England, to compete in the open golf championships at Brookline, Mass., September 21 next, is well known to both Stewart Maiden and Scotty McKenzie, local professionals, says McKen-

"The two big golfers of Great Britain are townsmen, both Vardon and Edward Ray having been born at Grouville, in the Isle of Jersey. Ray began his workaday life there as a fisherman and Vardon as a gardener. Ray is the younger, being thirty-four years old, and Vardon is forty-two. Both met last November in a $2,000 match at Sunningdale, in England, and Vardon won.

In their methods these golfers are in sharp contrast. Vardon is the perfection of golfing technique, and there is a scientific reason for everything he does. His driving swing is perfect, and his feature as it is based on logical deductions from a knowledge of the results of forces. Ray, on the other hand, has a swing that is essentially a lunge at the ball, something on the order of that of Hilton, who seems to be "preessing" on the teeing ground. Vardon has a fondness for a brassie, but Ray uses for brassie shots either a driver or a cleek."

Follows: "Navin out, $12,500 to Cobb, unassisted."

Seems to us that Senator Hoke Smith ought to have an assist on that play.

Ray Keating and Al Schultz, the latter late of Savannah, are about the best hurlers the Yankees have now.

It's marvelous the way Long Tom Hughes, of the Senators, hangs on. This old lad ought to be on the down slant by now, but he doesn't seem to be.

Mike Balenti paid $100 out of his own pocket toward his transportation from Alaska when he joined the Browns.

Frank Chance says he would give $10,000 to-day for Tinker. But Joe isn't on the market.

Leon Ames has settled down a lot this year. It is believed that he will become a fairly dependable pitcher by the time he is 35.

Donnie Bush swears that every time he gets on bases this year he is going to keep running till he scores or they put him out. He wants to measure speed with Cobb and Milan.

Festus Higginns recently paid $400 for his release from the Scranton club rather than sign for $15 a month.

Time was when opposing clubs welcomed Detroit's pitchers, feared their batters. Now conditions are reversed. The batters are weak, the pitchers strong.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, April 29.—So far in the race this year, the clubs have got away more in a bunch than they did last season. There has been no early starter as Cincinnati was last year, only to crumble and fall back when the going became hardest. After a poor beginning in the first few games, the Giants have struck their stride now and are walking along at a good pace.

From my point of view, it is necessary for the Giants to get a good lead before the Western clubs come East on the first swing around the circuit, because it is from the West that the Giants will get the heavy competition, as usual. Philadelphia is the only Eastern team we have faced which appears to be very much stronger than it was last year, and this is simply because the club is more on its balance than it was in the race of 1912. The team was handicapped by injuries and Horace Fogel, and Dootin could not get results out of the playing strength of his men. But this season "Charley" has obtained a new owner, who acts like a regular fellow, and the Phillies struck me as being a strong club. I believe that they will surprise a lot of people, both in and out of the big leagues, before they have finished the race.

TO my mind, the Philadelphia pitching staff is as strong as any in the league, not barring those of the Pirates and the Giants. Seton has started out as if he intended to blow himself to a good year, and Alexander and Chalmers have already proved their worth. The Quakers also have more real strength in the field at this writing, with Magee and Lobert both in the game, two men who have suffered from injuries and umpires in the last couple of years. Lobert is a good ball player—don't make any mistake about that—and he will bolster up the infield and make it work together. Lobert puts a lot of pepper and dash into the game, and it is his fearless playing which makes him the victim of so many accidents. He does not avoid anything that comes his way.

The case of Pittsburgh is the case of Wagner. The club is making great efforts to keep the real condition of the big Dutchman a secret, but it is no news around the circuit that grave fears have been expressed by men on the Pirates as to whether Wagner will ever play regularly again. Without Wagner, the Pirate infield looks very bad. It is as easy to build an infield around Wagner as it is to put up a fortress with Gibraltar as a nucleus. Tear down Gibraltar and where is your fortress? Eliminate Wagner, and what has become of your infield?

CLARKE has a great pitching staff, and his outfield is stronger and faster than last year, with the addition of Hoffman in playing form. He is a fast man, covers much ground and is a vicious hitter. With Wagner, the Pirates would have a great chance at the pennant. Without him, I fall to see them; although, of course, I may be wrong. Seldom have I been able to cash a bet on a ball game. Infrequently do I lose a political wager, although I know nothing of politics and its ins and outs.

EVERS seems to be going pretty well with his Cubs, better than most of us expected he would. His pitching staff is moving smoothly and his infield appears to be very evenly balanced. Evers has returned to form and solved the question of shortstop for Evers. Saier is a growing first baseman, improving with the passing of each season. Zimmerman is a hitter that would add to any club, and is a reliable fielder. If Evers can maintain his pitchers in some kind of shape and hold the club together so that it is working all the time, I expect he will be up in the fight for the pennant. In this keeping the team together, Bresnahan is bound to be a big aide, because he is a close friend of Evers and because, like many another ball player, he wants to cut in on the world series coin this fall. I understand that Roger is adviser extraordinary to "Johnny," and that the pitching department has been practically passed over to him. Offhand, nobody comes to my mind who is more competent to whip a string of pitchers into good shape. Roger did a whole lot with a mediocre set he managed in St. Louis.

TINKER has made a poor start with Cincinnati, but, if I was "Joe," I would consider this a good omen, because "Hank" O'Day got away like a sprinter last year, and then the club fell down badly, while the newspapers fell on him and roasted him to a frazzle. "Joe" has not aroused the anticipations of his rooters by any great showing so far, and if he comes through strong, they will have a great chance to fall into line later. The Reds are a strong club, with good ball players. They are bound to come through and make a fight, perhaps, for the pennant, but they are sure to be up there. Tinker has too much of a kick in him to stand for anything else.

The American League has not straightened itself out, in my mind, at all yet, but by next Thursday I think I'll have a better line on conditions there and can say something about it.

Blood Troubles--S. S. S.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply, why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

S. S. PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Athletes at G. M. A. are showing a great amount of interest in preparing for the prep meet, May 3. Shneider and Babu are practicing with the hammer, while Griffin, Maret and Brown are showing to good advantage with the shot.

Sifford, of G. M. A., should prove a star in the prep meet this year. This boy is a wonder in the hurdles and short dashes. Smith has equaled the best records made at G. M. A. for the broad jump, and is doing over 5 feet daily in the high jump.

Jim Parks, the crack sprinter on the Tech High track team, is going after the record for the 100-yard dash in the annual prep meet this year. Parks thinks his toughest competitor will be Charlie Allen, of Marist. Parks is training every day for this event.

The annual prep meet scheduled to take place at Tech High may be held on the Marist College field. The latter place would be by far the better place of the two, as it is much larger than the Tech campus.

This afternoon Marist and G. M. A. will meet for the second time this season. The game will be played at College Park. The first meeting between the two nines was an easy victory for the Marist boys, and they expect to repeat again to-day.

The Tech High players seem confident of winning the local Prep League pennant this year. Their victory over Marist has given them a great deal of confidence. They certainly have as good a chance as any of the other teams.

The baseball team of Boys High will practice steadily for the return game with Marist May 3. The high school lads are determined to win this contest, as it practically means the Prep League pennant for them. Boys High has one victory over Tech High, who in turn defeated Marist. This makes the high school boys favorites in the pennant race.

Although Tech High won the game against Marist last week, some of the men came out of the game badly crippled. Weston, the pitcher, sprained an ankle. Bill Parks, shortstop, also sprained an ankle, while Hare and Hancock, catchers, have smashed fingers.

Bill Bedell, the star track man and baseball player of Tech High, is out of school for a few days on account of sickness. Bill worked a bit too hard in the high school track meet April 18, and has not been well since.

Jean Weston, of Tech High, is the speediest pitcher in the local Prep League this season, and looks good for a berth on the all-prep. He pitched a great game against Marist, and will be in the next game against Boys High.

Athletes are receiving a lot of support at Boys High this year. The baseball and track teams are the best the school has had in years, and more enthusiasm is being shown by the students than ever before.

A Waste of Time

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A YOUNG girl writes: "I am seventeen, and love a man four years my senior. But he meets other girls. When he meets men with these other girls he always talks to me but he keeps on meeting them. How can I break him of this?" Ethel tells her troubles: "What do you think of a young man who professes to love a girl and still admits he goes with others? He claims I am the only girl he cares for, but still he meets others."

"I am seventeen," writes B. W., and in love with a boy of nineteen. We have been meeting each other steady till last week, when he didn't come, and I found out he was meeting another girl and was deceiving me. For all that, I cannot seem to lose my love for him. How can I win back his love and get him from the other girl?"

Can't Believe Him. Heartbroken writes: "I am eighteen and in love with a boy two years older. He tells me he loves me, but I see him with other girls. When I ask him if he cares for the other girls he always says 'No,' but I can't believe him. How can I win him back?"

There are no two in the world, perhaps, who can agree on what it is that causes the greatest waste of time. And by that I mean something a little more than time as measured by the clock and calendar. I mean the value of it, as compared with the results achieved. One wastes time while waiting for a car, but the car finally comes. One wastes time in reading worthless literature, but often such mental nausea results that one is cured of the desire.

The skeptical says that much time is wasted in making love, but those of broader minds and younger hearts have learned that every such experience leaves one a little more sympathetic and charitable. The man who hoards his money regards every minute wasted that doesn't bring him more, and the tramp who spends his days blinking lazy eyes at the sun is sure that every one who works is a time waster.

But I contend that there is a way more prodigal than all of these. And that is the time wasted in trying to win back a lover whose affections have begun to cool.

It is as if one lost something absolutely worthless in the beginning, and instead of straightening up and walking on, glad to be relieved of the burden, went down on one's knees in the dust and dirt to seek for that which was lost.

A Good Thing. There is a well and a cry and time is spent in weeping that should be devoted to rejoicing. A love that can be lost is a mistaken love; it is the best thing that can happen to a girl to lose it before it is fettered on her.

If it had been worth while it wouldn't have been lost so easily. It would have taken much more than the pretty face of another girl to have won it away. The fact that it could be lost puts a price mark on it, and that price mark is very, very low.

Yet day after day girls, on their knees in the dust of humiliation and despair, cry to me after vainly searching for the worthless bauble they have lost. "How can I win it back? Help me, for my heart is broken!"

I And how I would like to help you, you poor little girls with your aching hearts! But my method would not be the kind you seek. I would raise you to your feet and have you laugh at your loss, and walk on, glad to be relieved of the care of anything so worthless, and glad that you lost it before its possession had become more serious.

Good-Nature and Success

WHY ONE IS NOT COMPATIBLE WITH THE OTHER.

HOW many really successful men do you know who are good-natured? Your successful man may be willing to give you a lift, he may be one of the best employers going, but rarely you will find him brimming over with good nature. A good-natured man is a failure in business for many reasons. His fellow-workers soon find out his good nature and impose upon him. It is always a case of: "I say, Jones, old chap, you might count on these figures for me," or, "Jones, I should be awfully obliged if you'd help me with these accounts this afternoon—there's a good fellow! I want to get off early."

Too Busy for Others. The result is that Jones does his own work, and as much of every good deed's that he can. But he never gets the credit for the latter. Nor will he be appreciated any more by those around him. If there is any joke going on, then you may be sure Jones is the butt of it. "Oh, Jones won't mind! He's such a good-natured chap, you know!" Being of such a good nature, Jones lets everybody push him aside, and takes the jobs he could do equally as well—if it were not for his good nature. If there is any big business transaction to be pulled off, Jones is not there. The man chosen is the hard-headed, pushful type, who will drive as hard a bargain as possible. The good-natured man never drives a bargain. He would much rather give way for the sake of peace.

The simple fact is that a good-natured man has no will or temper of his own; no initiative. He always follows where others lead, afraid to strike out on his own account, for fear, not only of failure, but of being on other people's horns. He would do anything rather than disagree with his rivals. Following, instead of leading, he is always a servant, never a master.

What Did She Mean? "Lovers are prone to self-depreciation," said he, tenderly, as they sat looking at the stars. "I do not understand what you see in me that you love me so much." "That's what everybody says," giggled the ingenious maiden. "Then the silence became so deep that you could hear the stars twinkling."

CHILDREN

Parents Should Counsel Them About Their Habits

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

BEFORE you send your little girls and boys to the public school, take them in your arms and talk with them pleasantly, but yet seriously, regarding their conversation and habits while away from you. If you are not mentally fitted for the task of giving them some knowledge of the great facts which underlie all created life and giving these facts in the right way, it might be well for you to consult some of the women's clubs in your own town and ask for the best teacher of eugenics, and find what booklets have been written to guide parents in these very matters.

Eugenics Important.

This science of eugenics is becoming an important factor in the training of children, and it will not be difficult for you to learn something of its workings. It shows how the world is progressing, for ten years ago, when this subject was discussed in this column, it brought down a flock of disapproving letters, and horrified parents declared the proposition was one which aimed at the destruction of innocent childhood.

Now there are eugenic organizations formed all over the world, with the object of beginning to train children in right ideals of sex relations, and in so laying the foundation of mental and moral and physical health for the rising generations. The scientific facts of the dangers of alcoholic stimulants are being taught in schools, and it is having its marked effects on the minds of the young.

Ignorance Is Worse.

One small boy urged his parents to avoid the use of stimulants, giving them a scientific reason for his plan. It will be impossible for that boy to become a drunkard, for deep in his conscience is the knowledge of the destructive powers which lie in strong drink. The dangers which lie in ignorance of sex facts are much graver than ignorance of the evils of drink. Childhood is imperilled, youth, maturity and future generations menaced by this ignorance.

The public schools and all private schools and all country schools are endeavoring to do away with good children are taught everything save the most vital truths of life during school hours, and there is no guidance or protection given them out of school hours.

Innocent and perverted are thrown side by side, and sacred facts are made known to pure young minds in the guise of obscenity and depravity. Mothers and fathers are blind and stupid on these subjects, and through conduct and vanity imagine their children beyond and above any danger of contamination. Yet the contamination takes place all the same.

It is the business of instructors to provide the common-sense teaching which parents so woefully lack in the training of the young. But let it be done wisely, carefully and delicately. Many books, written with a view of guiding the young away from unhealthful thoughts, only serve to guide toward them, and many instructors, who seek to allay precocious curiosity, produce it by lack of right method.

Should Be Taught.

Children should be taught that we are ONE WITH NATURE, ONE WITH MOTHER EARTH. And that as plants spring forth, so does man, and that God, the Source and the Cause, lies back of everything, and that all His methods are beautiful, sacred and holy.

And then they should be taught to be silent on these subjects, and to refuse to talk or associate with children who make light or obscene references to the topic.

Advice to the Lovelorn By BEATRICE FAIRFAX. YOU ARE RIGHT. DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am 20 years of age and recently met a young man two years my senior. He asked to call on me, which I permitted. But each time he asks me for a kiss, which I don't think is proper until we are engaged. MAMIE. Don't grant his request until you have your engagement ring on your finger.

NOT A MATTER OF WILL. DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am 16 and in love with a young man one year my senior. A few weeks ago he left the city and promised to write to me. Shall I wait and see if he writes, or shall I forget him? MADGE. If you love him you will find that forgetting is not entirely a matter of will. I question the depth of your affection. Were it the kind that endures, you would, at least, give him opportunity to prove his affection.

An Easy Solution.

THE mother of Master Gustave Adolphus Bims was giving a Christmas party, and, on the sole condition that he behaved himself, he was allowed to participate in the festivities.

The guests were seated round a friendly cup of tea, preparatory to the games, and were waited on by a maid with a swollen face. The youthful saint scrutinized the rounded contour of her cheek with keen avidity as she moved to and fro in the performance of her duties. Then, rising and stretching himself to the full extent of his four-foot nothing, he thrust both hands deep into the pockets of his black velvet Fauntleroy, and cried, as he glanced around:

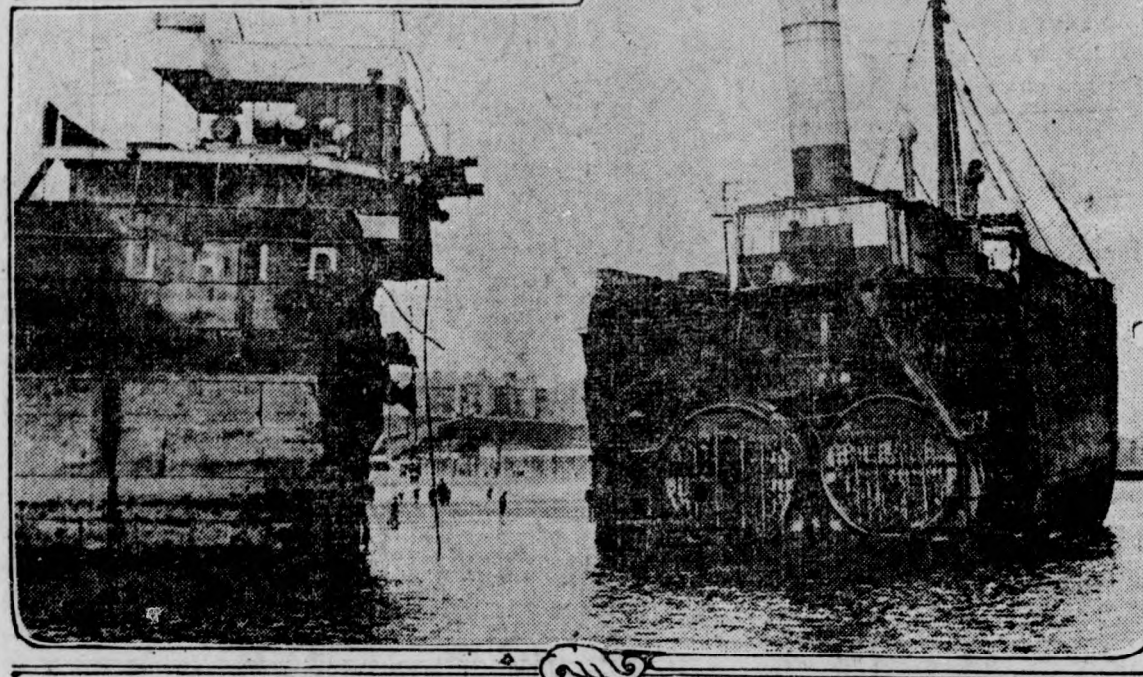

"Mother, I do wish you could have a toothache, instead of Jane." His adoring mother showed her pearly teeth in an amused smile at her expectant friends as she asked: "Why, darling?" "Because," answered the small incorrigible, as he resumed his seat on the black satin hassock which so completed the picture, "you can pull yours out, and Jane can't."

The Ship That Broke Itself

Never, perhaps, has the camera illustrated the force of wind and waves on a vessel of iron and steel as strikingly as in this picture.

This shows the German freighter Orion, which was blown on the Riker sands, Sunderland, England, during a terrific gale.

All efforts to float the vessel failed, and it was abandoned. Within two weeks after it had stranded it split literally in two, as the picture shows.

THE STEAMSHIP ORION ON THE SANDS.

Freak Companies

COMPANIES may be formed for almost any purpose, so long as that purpose is not an unlawful one. That is the reason why any one who has an idea for making money, no matter how freakish or impossible it may be, is able to invite the public to subscribe funds for the carrying out of that idea.

As Mr. Herbert W. Jordan, who has written and lectured much on the subject of company promotion and flotation, has pointed out, since the days of the South Sea Bubble, companies have been promoted by the score with objects quite as impracticable as that of the famous philosopher who formulated a plan to extract sunbeams from cucumbers, to be preserved in hermetically sealed bottles and let loose to warm the air in cold and wet winter weather.

The fact that scientists have expressed the opinion that gold is to be found in sea-foam, which, if it could be extracted, would make us rich beyond the dreams of avarice, led some enterprising persons a few years ago to form a company with the object, according to their prospectus, of gathering the foam and placing it on the market. The scheme attracted a large number of people, who applied for shares in the hope of becoming sea-foam millionaires.

Balance of $4,500.

Equally extraordinary was the company floated by certain individuals who told a confiding public that many fortunes were to be made by importing compressed dried grapes from Spain, Italy and elsewhere, then saturating them with good English water, making wine from them. It was stated in the prospectus that dried grapes could be imported at a much cheaper rate than wine, and that it was possible to produce an equal quantity of wine of equal quality to that made abroad. Thousands of pounds were subscribed by the public, who firmly believed in the idea until the scheme collapsed.

Another company was floated to raise the vessels sunk by Nelson in the Bay of Aboukir, with the treasure contained therein, when he gained his victory over the French in what is known to history as the battle of the Nile. The result was that further treasure was lost in addition to that which went down with Napoleon's unfortunate ships.

Presumably as a joke, one individual formed a company with a capital of $5 divided into 500 shares of one cent each.

Twenty companies, according to Mr. Jordan, were formed in a fortnight in London for providing seats for those who wished to view the Diamond Jubilee procession of 1897, and one clever individual managed to pay his return fare to America, and have a balance of $4,500 in hand, by selling somebody else's window ten times over at $500 a time.

The window-letting public seem to be ignorant of the fact that any seven individuals might form a company bearing a high-sounding name, with an insignificant capital, and that, promises and agreements notwithstanding, not a penny beyond the subscribed capital can be legally recovered. A company, for instance, with a paid-up capital of $50, may enter into a contract to purchase a set of windows for $5,000, but the owner of the windows has no legal redress against his customers for more than $50, which represents—if not already exhausted—the total value of the concern.

Turning the Tables.

IN some cases counsel receive answers to questions which they had no business to put, and these, if not quite to their liking, are what they justly deserve. The following story of Robert Harris, a celebrated negro minstrel, is a case in point.

"You are in the minstrel business, I believe?" inquired the lawyer.

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"Is not that rather a low calling?"

"I don't know but what it is, sir," replied the minstrel; "but it is so much better than my father's that I am proud of it."

Getting Gold from Foam of the Sea, Etc.

the owner of the windows has no legal redress against his customers for more than $50, which represents—if not already exhausted—the total value of the concern.

"What was your father's calling?" he inquired.

"He was a lawyer," replied Harris, in a tone that sent the whole court into a roar of laughter as the discomfited lawyer sat down.

She didn't dare turn and face him, but she knew from the stealthiness of the STEP that he was pursuing her. She also knew that he was six feet high and of powerful physique, and that his cruel black eyes were fixed upon her.

She heard a clank, clank, clank, keeping time with his step. Ah, he carried a sword! More than one! There were two, and in his right hand he carried a long, sharp knife.

He was after her life's blood! She must walk faster. The STEP kept pace with her. And there was now the clank, clank, clank of three swords, five knives and a gun keeping time with the STEP.

She tried to run; her knees failed her. She tried to scream; the sound died in her throat. She felt that she would go mad with fright. The monster pursuing her had now grown to ten feet in height, and he had his knife raised to plunge into her back.

"Spare me!" she cried, with her head bowed in the ground.

"Spare me with you?" said a thin little voice in contempt, and Daysey Mayme looked up to find herself kneeling before a boy of seven.

In one hand he carried a number of empty milk cans, which had clanked as he walked.

How To Be Beautiful

Are American women deficient in the art of making themselves beautiful? Anita d'Este, a noted authority on beauty, thinks they are.

"In nearly every country of Europe I have striven to civil the essence of beauty and the mystery of each system devoted to its culture and the more my search took me upon untrodden ground, the more convinced I became that the most of this wealth lay hidden from the women of America."

Is what she says in "Modern Fountains of Youth," the opening article of the May number of Good Housekeeping Magazine. She carefully analyzes the various methods by which the beautiful women of Europe scientifically retain their loveliness. This message from a woman who has spent years in examining the "beauty culture" systems of the world has much of information and encouragement for the women of this country.

Read it for a really helpful article. It introduces a new department, "Good Looks," which the Countess of Warwick has consented to conduct for Good Housekeeping Magazine. Every woman interested in improving her good looks will want to read what this noted beauty has to say month by month. Your newsdealer has a copy for you.

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

DAYSEY MAYME APPLETON had dined at a home where there were so many children in the family it was necessary for the grown folks to pass a megaphone around at the dinner table in order to be heard.

Naturally, under such circumstances, Daysey Mayme could not permit her host to see her home. It would mean a rude interruption of the children's hour, a poetic period observed in this family by the father holding three, while the mother spanked the remaining seven to bed.

"I'm not afraid," said Daysey Mayme. "These are the days of advanced womanhood when any woman can put a mere man to rout."

Then, with her head held high, as becomes a representative of the future arbiters of our destiny, she went forth bravely and proudly.

Had she been a man she would have whistled, for the recollection of that megaphoned table had made her quiet spinsterhood a joy in comparison. She was dreamily happy, when suddenly a sound behind her made her heart jump with fear.

It was the sound of a STEP. A MAN'S step, and it was BEHIND her and COMING FAST.

She remembered that she must be every inch a woman, and she tried to be brave. But the gooseflesh began to rise, the cold chills played hide and seek up and down her spine, and her hair began to stand on end, no easy task with so much false hair to be lifted.

She didn't dare turn and face him, but she knew from the stealthiness of the STEP that he was pursuing her. She also knew that he was six feet high and of powerful physique, and that his cruel black eyes were fixed upon her.

She heard a clank, clank, clank, keeping time with his step. Ah, he carried a sword! More than one! There were two, and in his right hand he carried a long, sharp knife.

She tried to run; her knees failed her. She tried to scream; the sound died in her throat. She felt that she would go mad with fright. The monster pursuing her had now grown to ten feet in height, and he had his knife raised to plunge into her back.

She made another attempt to run. The STEP kept close behind. With a sudden scream she turned and threw herself on her knees before the villain.

"Spare me!" she cried, with her head bowed in the ground.

"Spare me with you?" said a thin little voice in contempt, and Daysey Mayme looked up to find herself kneeling before a boy of seven.

In one hand he carried a number of empty milk cans, which had clanked as he walked.

MARRIED LIFE

The Third Year

Warren's Sister Curtly Refuses to Help Helen Entertain Their Cousin

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WELL, well, not going to stand for this," declared Warren grimly. "If she can't get up and have breakfast with us, she can do without."

"But, dear, she's used to having her coffee and toast in bed," ventured Helen. "She says it makes her head ache to get up without it, and that her mother always lets her sleep until nine."

"Piffle!" If Aunt Emma wants to spoil her, all right, but she'll get no humoring here. That's all rot about her delicate health. She looks stronger than you do, and I'm not going to let you wait on her."

It was so rarely that Warren considered her, that Helen felt a faint glow of pleasure at this.

"Now you tell her to-day," he persisted, "that hereafter she'll have to have her breakfast with us."

"Oh, I hate to do that, she'll write back to Aunt Emma that we—"

"Don't care a hang what she writes back. If we've got to have her here for two or three weeks, we're not going to do any extra humoring. Understand?"

"Hush, dear, if she's awake, she may hear you."

"Do her good if she does. What's the matter with these eggs? Don't poach very well, do they?"

34 Cents a Dozen.

"Why, they should—they're white leghorns. I paid thirty-four cents a dozen." Then, after a moment's pause, "Dear, don't you think Carrie ought to ask her there for a few days?"

Warren shrugged his shoulders. Like the rest of the family, he stood somewhat in awe of his married sister.

"Don't know. Carrie's not keen on having company."

"Well, we're not either, and I don't see why we should be expected to do it all. Carrie's to call this afternoon, and if she doesn't invite her I'd like to hint in some way that we think she should. Would that be all right?"

"Fire ahead, but I don't think Carrie will take any of your hints. Wonder if I'll need an overcoat this morning?" as he rose from the table.

"Oh, yes, you'd better wear it. You're not over your cold yet."

When she had seen Warren off Helen went to Alice's door. There was no answer at first, but a louder knock brought a sleepy "Come in."

The disordered room, grating on Helen, and she glanced disapprovingly at the clothes strewn about.

"Alice, it's ten minutes after nine," she said coldly, picking up a skirt from the floor.

"Oh, is it that late?" yawned Alice. She was undeniably pretty, lying there with her long blonde hair over the pillow and a faint pink flush in her cheeks. "But I'm so sleepy—do I have to get up just yet?"

Get Up for Breakfast.

"It puts Maggie back so with her work. Warren was saying this morning that he'd rather you'd get up to have breakfast with us."

"I couldn't eat a thing if I did," deviously, "and I'd have a dreadful headache. But I'll get up now, as soon as brings my breakfast."

Maggie grumbledly prepared and carried in the tray. She had taken a dislike to this guest, who demanded so much waiting on.

"Helen, Helen, will you lend me a ring iron?" called Alice a little later.

"Not to bring any."

"Why, I haven't one," answered Helen. "I never use an iron."

"Well, I've simply got to have one! I was too sleepy to roll up my hair last night. I wonder if Maggie hasn't one?"

"I'm sure I don't know," coldly. "But Alice was not to be discouraged, and with a kimono thrown about her she ran out to Maggie, returning with a curling iron.

"Oh, Cousin Helen," she called again.

The Great Charm of Naturalness

An Interview With Miss Valli Valli, the English Beauty

MISS VALLI VALLI IN TWO CHARMING POSES.

In the small picture on the left England's exponent of natural beauty shows an attitude of affectation which she deprecates and continually guards against. The other pose shows her as her natural self.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

ALL you pathetic little pink and white would-be beauties who march up and down Peachtree or Whitehall of a sunny spring day—don't you want to know how to be really pretty? Don't you want to be—not a "gaslight" belle—but a sweet girl who can brave Old Sol's bright rays in the calm assurance that he is revealing beauty, not betraying beauty's secrets?

Compels Sympathy.

Well, then—BE NATURAL. Naturalness does not seem to be the fad of this moment, but it will have its day soon, I think, for we have a wonderful exponent of natural charm and the charm of naturalness prominently before us now. This is Miss Valli Valli, the actress now playing in New York in "The Purple Road."

As Wanda, the little maid of Vienna, who loved Napoleon wisely—if too well for his deserving—Valli Valli is an exquisite, sympathy-compelling figure.

"How do you do it?" I asked. "How do you hold all of us throbbing and waiting, as you stand in your simple gray frock on the grand staircase in Napoleon's palace, while all around are magnificent women in imperially gorgeous clothes?"

"Naturalness and feeling," began the girlish star, and then broke off. "Oh, do I hold you like that? I want to so—I am so glad." And then we both laughed at the unstudied exhibition of her pet "naturalness."

"Ah, but I do believe in naturalness everywhere. Look natural, be natural, and then the great feelings can find expression through you."

The dainty singing actress had perched herself fearlessly under the glare of the low-sung incandescent lamp that revealed—but found nothing to betray. A true "crowning glory" is her coronet of copper-toned brown hair, so plentiful that it is quite sufficient dower of beauty without the addition of a soft pink flushed skin and great gray eyes. And later she told me her simple, effective method of curling for hair and skin, true beauty secrets—will you know how?

"Ellen Terry taught me to 'make up'! I don't use pink and white glaring high-lights, but the bronze, brown-red tones the men of the stage employ. This is so much more like the tones of the human skin. You see, to look natural on the stage one has to use make-up as THE EXTRA OUNCE OF EMPHASIS that counteracts the glare of the lights. That is not needed on the street—though I must confess to a very earnest affection for my powder puff. As a finish—to dust off the little shine from the

Household Suggestions

To make a good glue, always ready for use without previous heating, break up the glue into small pieces, and put it with some whiskey in an air-tight bottle. Leave it for four days, shaking the bottle occasionally, then cork down. As much glue should be used as the whiskey will dissolve. Glue prepared in this way will keep for years and always remain liquid.

Invalids who dislike the flavor of meat extract will be able to take it if a teaspoonful or so is added to a cupful of boiling milk. The milk disguises the taste of the meat extract. A small quantity of this mixture taken when there is a feeling of exhaustion will prove an admirable restorative.

active oil glands of a healthy skin powder is invaluable, I think."

"But how keep the skin healthy when grease paint and rouge must be applied so often?" I asked.

A Real Food.

There was a low-throated little English laugh. "I know a wonderful skin food or tonic or whatever you call it over here. Soap and water. The best of soap and plenty of water."

"Grease paint and rouge have been going on my face since I was seven, such a skin if water plus soap could do it."

"Indeed, yes. My hair, too—I wash it once every week, and I don't crimp or wave. I brush and brush till every hair is alive and then, since it's all soft and clean, it looks well."

And it looks marvelously well—sisters of crimps and marcel waves and monthly shampoos. It is fresh and clean and natural and vital, in keeping with the wholesome girl whose small, well-poised head it crowns.

"Of course you add fresh air to water as a tonic—since you're English," said I, sure of my ground here.

"You're quite right. I do. I love outdoors. All outdoors—and gardens. Ah! that is the one thing I miss over here. You live in hotels and apartments. At home we have houses and gardens—and so I may have flowers—and dogs—and the healthy, money things I love."

And she said it with the sweet naturalness that makes this charming little fresh air, soap and water English girl even prettier off the stage than on it.

Dorothy Dix Tells You How

To Be Happy Though Stout

"Women Have Got Fat on the Brain, and Have Gone Mad on Getting Thin"

By DOROTHY DIX.

A FAT girl has written me a tear-soaked letter in which she bemoans her increased belt measure, and asks me if I can give her any good, reliable recipe for reducing her weight.

No, I cannot. If I knew any way to make this too, too solid flesh melt I should not be engaged in the occupation of writing articles for this column for my daily bread. I should be lending Mr. Rockefeller money, and helping out such poor neighbors as Andrew Carnegie and Hetty Green. The people with even an alleged anti-fat remedy rake in fortunes. A real reduction cure, that would actually reduce, would cost so much money that it would make Aladdin's lamp look like old junk.

For women have got fat on the brain, and they have all gone stark, staring mad on the subject of getting thin. It has superseded all other interests with them, and where two or three are gathered together the conversation becomes nothing more nor less than an experience meeting of the different fool things they have tried in order to acquire a willow figure. And at that, they have failed.

A Burning Issue.

How to get thin is the burning issue in every feminine breast. The choicest compliment that you can pay a lady is to tell her how much she has fallen off, and the feminine definition of a cat is a sister woman who says, "Why, my dear, how well you are looking! You must have gained ten pounds this winter!"

Nor do we women vainly long for attenuation. What they go through, the agony they endure in trying to achieve it, make the sufferings of the early Christian martyrs seem a mere picnic. The maddening thirst of the Ancient Mariner who saw water, water everywhere, but had not a drop to drink, is experienced every day by millions of women who sit at tables groaning under food and drink, but who deny themselves everything but a sip of water and a crust of dry toast for fear of adding another pound to their weight.

That the living skeleton is the accepted ideal of the feminine form of to-day nobody will deny. But why? Who was the Paris who first picked out the skinny woman as conforming nearest to the feminine standard of perfect pulchritude? Who originated the theory that a lady love should have a lean and hungry look? Certainly, angles are not as beautiful as curves.

Surely, bones are not as alluring as firm, warm flesh. A haggard cheek, with hollows in it, is not as kissable as a round dimpled one. A full, milk-white throat is more enchanting than a stranky one that looks like an anatomical exhibit of glands and muscles.

Of course, to the eye of the cubist, or the futurist, the thin, anemic, tubercular looking woman may be prettier than the plump, healthy one, but as a matter of fact most of us don't object to a reasonable amount of adipose tissue on a woman. We like it.

This is especially true of men who as a general thing, prefer the kind of a girl who makes a nice armful, instead of the kind that looks as if she were nothing but the original rib out of which her sex was made. You never hear of a husband urging his wife to bant and grow thin, or to lace a little tighter. On the contrary, every husband who takes enough interest in his wife to notice what she is doing urges her to eat all she wants, and drink what she likes, and have her clothes made loose enough to be comfortable.

However you look at it, the cult of emaciation is a foolish one. To begin with, it is as broad as it is long, and it has its disadvantages as well as its advantages. It is quite true that a slim figure looks younger than a plump one, but when a woman achieves a slightness on one place she gets it in another, and with the twenty-nine waist goes a neck like a turkey gobbler's, and arms the size of a yard stick.

Also Wrinkles.

Also wrinkles come quicker in a thin face than in a plump one, so that in the end it is a choice between having a young-looking figure or a young-looking face.

"Nobody loves a fat man," said the disconsolate hero in a recent play, but everybody loves a fat old woman. Look about you and you will see that the most adored wives, the most beloved mothers, and the dearest friends of friends are not sybil-like creatures, but comfy, stout old ladies, who make the hearts of a straight front manker.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

HUSBAND NAILED RUBBER ON GATES

Wife so Weak and Nervous Could Not Stand Least Noise—How Cured.

Munford, Ala.—"I was so weak and nervous while passing through the Change of Life that I could hardly live. My husband had to nail rubber on the gates for I could not stand it to have a gate slam. I also had backache and a fullness in my stomach. I noticed that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was advertised for such cases and I sent and got a bottle. It did me so much good that I kept on taking it and found it to be all you claim. I recommend your Compound to all women afflicted as I was."—Mrs. F. P. Mulender, Munford, Alabama.

An Honest, Dependable Medicine is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Root and Herb medicine originated nearly forty years ago by Lydia E. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., for controlling female ills.

Its wonderful success in this line has made it the safest and most dependable medicine of the age for women and no woman suffering from female ills does herself justice who does not give it a trial.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

CLEEK OF THE FORTY FACES

By T. W. HANSHAW.

Copyright by Doubleday, Page & Co. TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Cleek was on his feet like a flash. "Not the great Septimus Norworth?" he questioned eagerly. "Not the man who invented lithamite?—the greatest authority on high explosives in England, surely?"

"Aye—him's the one, poor gentleman," replied Nippers agitatedly. "I thought it like as the name would be familiar, sir. A goodish few have heard of us, one way and another."

"It Reads the Papers."

"Yes," acquiesced Cleek. "Lithamite carried his name from one end of the globe to the other, and his family affairs came into unusual prominence in consequence. 'Widower, wasn't he?—hard as nails and bitter as gall. Had an only son, hadn't he?—a wild young blade who went the pace; took up with chorus girls, music hall ladies and persons of that stripe and got kicked out from under the parental roof in consequence."

"Lummy, now! think of you a know-in about that!" said Mr. Nippers, in amazement. "But then, your bein' with Mr. Norworth and him bein' what he is—why, of course, Scotland Yard it do know everything, I'm told, sir."

"Yes—it reads the papers occasionally, Mr. Nippers," said Cleek. "I may take it from your reply, may I not, that I am correct regarding Mr. Septimus Norworth's son?"

"Fegs, yes, sir—right as rain. Leastwise, from what I've heard, sir. I never see the young gentlemen myself. That happened before Mr. Norworth come to live in these parts—a matter of some four years or more ago. Always had his laboratory here, sir—built it on this land he leased from Sir Ralph Droger's father in the early sixties—and used to come over frequent and shut himself in the Round House for days on end; but never come here to live until after that flare-up with Master Harry, sir. Come then and built living quarters beside the Round House, and, after a piece, fetched Miss Renfrew and old Patty Dax over to live with us."

"Miss Renfrew and old Patty Dax? Who are they?"

"Miss Renfrew is his niece, sir—darter of a dead sister. Old Patty Dax, she was the cook. I dunno what her be now, though—her died six months ago and an hired Mistress Armroyd in her place. French piece, her am, though bein' widdler of a Yorkshireman, and though I don't much fancy foreigners nor their way, sir, this I will say: her keeps the house like a pin and her cookin's amazin' tasty—fegs, yes."

"You are an occasional caller in the servants' hall, I see, Mr. Nippers," said Cleek, serenely, as he took up his coat and shook it preparatory to putting it on. "I think, Mr. Norworth, that in the interests of the public at large it will be well for some one a little more efficient than the local constabulary to look into this case, so if you don't mind making yourself a trifle more presentable, it will be as well for us to get Mr. Nippers to show us the way to the scene of the tragedy. While you are doing it I will put a few 'Headland' questions to our friend here, if you don't mind assuring him that I am competent to advise."

"Right you are, old chap," said Norworth, taking his cue. "Nippers, this is Mr. George Headland, one of the best of my Yard detectives. He'll very likely give you a tip or two in the matter of detecting crimes, if you pay attention to what he says."

Paying Attention.

Nippers, "paid attention" forthwith. The idea of being in consultation with any one connected with Scotland Yard tickled his very soul; and, in fancy, he already saw his name getting into the newspapers of London, and his fame spreading far beyond his native weald.

"I won't trouble you for the full details of the murder, Mr. Nippers," said Cleek. "Those, I fancy, this Miss Renfrew 'will be able to supply when I see her. For the present, tell me, how many other occupants does the house hold beyond these two of whom you

Up-to-Date Jokes

"HOW in the world have you kept your cook so long?"

"Sh! Don't let anybody. My husband dresses up as a policeman in the evening."

A—I thought you were a vegetarian, and now I see you eating mutton!"

B—Well, I am only an indirect vegetarian; I eat the meat of such animals as live on vegetable food.

Mr. Young—My little girl is nearly twenty years old, and hasn't learned to talk yet.

Mr. Peck—Don't let that worry you. My wife says she didn't learn to talk until she was nearly three, and now—

But Mr. Peck's voice at this point was choked with sobs.

Guy Mitchell's Lucky Day—Folsom
Lease Brings $7,000—Other Realty Notes.

On January 11, 1912, the Realty Investments sold to Guy Mitchell a 53.9 by 105-foot lot on Walton Street, for $50,000, and on April 17 Mr. Mitchell sold it to John G. and B. Frank Bell and Dr. Delos Hill for $75,000. The papers in the various transactions went to record yesterday.

The Bells have taken one-quarter interest each and Dr. Hill has one-half. Mr. Mitchell bought this lot for $5,000 cash and gave nine annual notes of $5,000 each. He had taken up but one of the notes when he cashed in.

Folsom Lease Brings $7,000.
The lease and store fixtures of the Folsom Restaurant Company at 18-20 Marietta Street were auctioned off on the premises by B. Bernard this morning and brought $7,000. Dr. W. Von Riedl was the buyer, and it is understood that he represents outside parties who will improve the location and operate a restaurant or similar establishment.

This is one of the most valuable properties in town and the present 10-year lease calls for a rental of $9,600 to $10,800 a year. The frontage on Marietta is 50 feet, and the restaurant is in two divisions.

Peachtree Acreage Bought.
O. D. Gorman, Jr., of the Smith & Ewing real estate agency, has bought of J. E. Smith, a well-known bank president of Dublin, Mr. Smith's one-fourth interest in 120 acres of land on Peachtree road, adjoining the Folsom farm, one mile from Chamblee, at the rate of $40,000 for the entire place, or something less than $10,000 for the quarter. Mr. Gorman was the owner of the other three-quarters.

Mr. Gorman will spend some $20,000 developing this tract. The frontage on Peachtree is 4,000 to 5,000 feet and the acreage is about 3,000 feet deep. The Buckhead car line is expected to reach it in another year.

Land Company Organized.
Charles L. Ryan, James D. Robinson, John S. Cohen, Turner Pitten and Lowry Arnold have petitioned the Superior Court for a charter for the Riverside Heights Land Company, to develop private properties. The capital stock will be $10,000 at the start, with a limit of $50,000.

To Buy Brookhaven Club.
Real estate men who see a good property enhancement in North Fulton in the acquisition of the Brookhaven Club by the Capital City Club are exulting to-day over the news that the two clubs will probably be run as one. At the annual meeting of the Capital City last night a committee was appointed to go into this matter, and it recommended the appointment of five additional members, the whole committee to decide on buying the 150 acres at Brookhaven. The original committee is composed of Robert F. Maddox, John E. Murphy and Dr. W. S. Elkin. They considered a definite proposition from the Brookhaven estate and are expected to take it up this week. In this event the members of the Capital City Club will begin at once to improve the Brookhaven property with the view of golfing, boating and bathing there throughout the summer.

Executor's Sale May 6.
Before the court house door Tuesday, May 6, Roff, Sims & Co. will sell at auction the property at 168 South Forsyth Street, between Garnett and Brotherton Streets, on terms of one-third cash, the assumption of a $2,000 loan, and the balance in one and two years, at 6 per cent. The lot is 53 by 203 and extends back to an alley.

This property is in the path of a steady development of the South Side's new wholesale district and is expected to bring a good price.

Lots Put on Market.
J. E. McCullough & Company have put on the market 30 residence lots in Capitol View at $450 to $650 each, on terms of $25 cash and $10 and $15 a month.

The Greater Atlanta Realty Company is offering 150 suburban lots for $100 each, on terms of $25 down and $25 a month, with no interest and no taxes.

B. M. Grant & Company have put on sale a number of lots on Beecher Street, a block east of Cascade Avenue and the Gordon Street car line, at $800, on terms of $200 cash and the balance in 6, 12, 18 and 24 months at 7 per cent. These lots are 50 by 175 feet to a 10-foot alley.

Builders Still Busy.

Among the citizens seeking permits for various kinds of dwellings at Building Inspector Hays' office in the City Hall to-day were G. H. Yancy, who will build a two-story frame dwelling at 1172 Piedmont Avenue; Carl Brenner, who will build a one-story frame on Barnett Street; J. B. Daniel, who will erect a one-story frame at 15 Park Lane; and B. Maier, who will add a story to dwellings at 306 and 308 Auburn Avenue, and at 105 and 107 Old Wheat Street, at a total cost of $8,000.

Recalling a Judge—And Women Led the Crusade in This First Example

Judge Weller, of San Francisco, has been recalled by a vote of the good people of that progressive city, and conservative citizens throughout the nation will be duly shocked at a radical performance which these conservative citizens have believed, or professed to believe, would shatter the foundations of order and of established government.

In this dreaded San Francisco situation there is another condition which should startle the reactionaries, and that is, that the women led the crusade for the recall of Judge Weller, and cast a large part of the vote which recalled him.

But when conservative, or even reactionary, citizens are familiar with the situation which resulted in the recall of Judge Weller they will be more disposed to realize that in this first instance at least of the recall of a judge their fearful forebodings are not wholly justified.

San Francisco is no more free from vice than any other city. There exist in that city, as elsewhere, evil men who prey upon the weaknesses of young girls and lure them to their ruin and to a life of shame.

As a rule such scoundrels, through the secrecy of their acts, or through the "pull" which they possess in certain corrupt quarters, escape the punishment of their evil deeds. But one such villain was caught and brought before the Grand Jury in San Francisco and held to answer before Judge Weller.

The crime of this scoundrel—we refer to the indicted criminal—was of the vilest kind, and the criminality of his act could not even find palliation in the consent of the girl he had destroyed.

Yet Judge Weller, through a sympathetic feeling, or through the influence of that political "pull" of which we hear and see so much, put this vile criminal under merely nominal bonds and allowed him to jump the bail and leave the State.

Judge Weller's action was typical of a condition which the good people of San Francisco had determined to destroy, and in order to begin the remedy forcefully and effectively they began with a petition to recall this unworthy judge.

Let the reactionaries of the country, if they will, defend this criminal and this judge who acted in collusion with him.

Let the reactionaries attack the principle of the recall and the policy of woman's suffrage in this instance, if they can find arguments with which to do so.

But The Georgian believes that the recall of judges has begun in a case which gives every evidence that the principle will be carefully and intelligently applied, and only exerted when its operation is obviously for the best interests of the community.

The Georgian also believes that the women have again demonstrated their intelligence and conscience and fine moral quality as citizens and voters, and The Georgian hails this case of Judge Weller as another and a convincing proof of the propriety and practicability of the progressive principles which it has so consistently advocated.

Possibly the Law Can Catch Up

"It cannot be helped—it is as it should be—that the law is behind the times," says Oliver Wendell Holmes, Justice of the Supreme Court, says the law must necessarily content itself with following a considerable distance in the wake of the world's prevailing thought—because it can only embody "beliefs that have triumphed in the battle of ideas" and "while there is doubt . . . the time for law has not come."

This is the same as to say that judges must decide to-day's cases according to the ideas of yesterday, and must not apply the ideas of to-day until after they have ceased to be applicable.

If the law is to be thought of as a building, to which the Legislature adds a new story to meet every new social situation, and if the new story cannot be built until after the new situation has been thoroughly mastered and understood by the mass of the people, without any help from the courts—then this astonishing philosophy of Justice Holmes must be allowed to be correct.

But if, on the contrary, the law is not at all to be thought of as a dead structure of brick or steel—if it is rather to be thought of as a living body, with red blood and brains and the breath of generations of justice-seeking men—if it has feet to stand on and hands to lay hold of the right weapons in the vast arsenal of principles and precedents—why, then, of course, the learned Justice has made a grave mistake.

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

CONCERNING A TRANSFER.

Editor The Georgian:

As a reader of the Hearst papers ever since the first publication of The American in Chicago, I take this means of bringing to the notice of the people in this city an injustice on the part of the street car company to a stranger in this city.

I attended the baseball game Friday and after the game boarded the first car I could crowd onto to get to the Terminal Hotel, where I am stopping. On paying my fare, I asked if the car would carry me to the Terminal Station, and was told by the conductor that it would not, but that he would give me a transfer, and that I should take any car marked Terminal Station. I left this car at the postoffice and walked over to the corner of Broad and Marietta Streets and took the first car marked, as I was directed to do by the conductor. The conductor on that car refused to take my transfer, and requested a cash fare, which I paid, as he said the transfer I had was from a Ponce DeLeon car and this car was the same line, so he could not accept my transfer. He said I could get off and use this transfer on a Hunter car.

What I would like to know is why I should have to wait for a certain car going to the same destination (for me)? There is no reason whatever for the street railway company not using a special transfer on a special car, as the passenger accepts this transfer in good faith and has absolutely no way of knowing whether it is good or not.

STRANGER FROM CHICAGO.

INFLUENCE OF HOME LIFE.

Editor The Georgian:

Recently I read in The Georgian an article by Mrs. Bohnfeld, police matron in Atlanta, in which she says that home life is more cause than anything else of girls' ruin, for which I want to thank her for her good, plain words. I agree with her in all she says. My plea is for mothers (and fathers) to talk plainly to their children. Do not let the children be afraid to make a confidant of mother or of father.

Gee! I Wonder Who Made Those?

Labor and Deserved Leisure

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1912, by American Journal-Examiner.

BEFORE we ask for leisure let us learn

The sacredness of time—the holy trust

Confided for a season to our care.

Labor and Leisure make life beautiful

When well divided, and labor means

Deserved reward, and leisure sweet repose.

Or happy explorations in the fair

Ascending paths of pleasure.

When we grow

In health, in wisdom and in happiness,

Through hours of freedom, then, and then alone,

We prove our right to clamor for more time;

But when the ginshop and the gambling den,

The dive, the public dance hall and the street

Send sodden creatures slowly back to toll

It makes a louder protest than the voice

Of tyrant Greed against the shortened hour

And lengthened wage of labor. Look to it

The leisure lifts you ere you ask for more.

No one can find fault or discharge them or dock their wage if they happen to be late or take a holiday.

To be compelled to go to work at a certain hour and to remain until the prescribed time, as has already been stated, is quite another story.

I hope to live to see the time when by inventions and by new conditions the whole drudgery of the world's work will be done on five hours' time and the human race allowed the remainder to grow, mentally and spiritually.

As I came of a long-lived race on two sides, I may realize my dream, but the world will realize it some time, surely.

When I think of the cotton mills, with their deafening roar and flying dust, where I have seen women working ten and twelve hours a day and begging positions for their children (and opposing any movement to prevent the employment of children as I personally knew them to be); when I think of the feather factories and sweatshops and the thousands of other manufactories where no light of day ever penetrates and men, women and children are subjecting eyesight and health on the altar of greed, I long to open all the doors and send the toilers forth to green fields and the woods for half of every working day; and I know the world would be better off and the progress of every race accelerated were it made possible for every toiler in the land to enjoy three hours of rest every day in the open air.

It is because I want the toilers themselves to help make the world realize their need that the quoted lines were written.

The Employer's Objection.

The employer's objection to the shorter hour of labor is understood as the voice of Greed.

But when the ginshop and the gambling den,

The dive, the public dance hall and the street

Send sodden creatures back to toll

After the ending of a holiday

It makes a louder protest than the voice

Of tyrant Greed . . .

I have seen a woman weep and have heard her regret the announcement of an unexpected holiday for her husband. He was a workman, a laborer.

She knew the holiday meant the wasting of his wages and the greater injury to his health than two days' work.

It meant the ginshop and the gambling den.

When an employer sees and knows of many similar results from holidays he is strengthened in his arguments against the shortened hours of labor. He does not stop to think of the thousands of women and the hundreds of sober and moral men all about him who need the added leisure to make home life worth the name.

He does not consider the pitiable cases of poor fathers who love their children, yet who never see them save when they are asleep.

Argument in Favor.

Nor the numbers of wives and mothers rising at the dawn to prepare a breakfast for husbands and sons who return at nightfall unable to do more than to fall into exhausted sleep.

For every argument against the movement of shortened hours of labor there are a dozen good ones in its favor, but it is a misfortune when the laboring man himself, by his bad habits during hours of leisure, makes a louder protest than the enemies of the movement are making.

LOOK TO IT THAT LEISURE LIFTS YOU ERE YOU ASK FOR MORE.

THE train rushed swiftly onward over mountains wild and steep. Past cataracts and waterfalls and canyons wide and deep; And then there came an awful crash—a bridge had tumbled in—And the shouting of a pilgrim could be heard above the din. The pilgrim stood upon the brink and turned a crank machine. Nor ran to help the injured—he must regulate his screen: For the guy was taking pictures of the wreck, which you must know—He was the traveling agent for a moving picture show.

In far Arabia's sandy clime a caravan was stopped. A whispered word passed down the line and then the camels dropped. The men lay down in awful fright beneath the living fort. The while the sandstorm frolicked like a giant bent on sport. And while the travelers groveled there, prepared to meet their doom. A Johnnie with a camera stood up amid the gloom. And turned the crank industriously to catch the sandy blow—He was the traveling agent for a moving picture show.

Charity Breeds Beggars

Any Man Who Has a Job Has a Chance, He Says, and the World Needs Capable People as Never Before. It Is Able and Willing to Pay Them for It if They Can Render a Service.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

SAILORS just ashore, with gay painted galleys in tow, and with three months' pay, are the most charitable men on earth. The beggars wax glad when Jack lumbers their way; but, alas, tomorrow Jack belongs to the poor.

Charity in the past has been prompted by weakness and whim—the penance of rogues—and often we give to get rid of the troublesome applicant.

Beggary and virtue were imagined to have something akin. Rags and honesty were sort of synonymous, and we spoke of honest hearts that beat 'neath ragged jackets. That was poetry, but was it art? Or was it just a little harmless exercise of the lachrymose glands?

Cringed and Crawled.

Riches and roguery were spoken of in one breath, unless the gentlemen were present, and then we cringed, cringed and crawled.

These things doubtless dated back to a time when the only mode of accumulating wealth was through oppression. Pirates were rich—honest men were poor. To be poor proved that you were not a robber. The heroes in war took cities and all they could carry away was theirs.

The monasteries were passing rich in the Middle Ages, because their valves opened only one way—they received much and paid out nothing. To save the souls of men was a just equivalent for accepting their services for the little time they were on earth.

The monasteries owned the land, and the rentals paid by the fiefs and vassals went into the Church's treasuries. Sir Walter Scott had an abbot say this: "I took the vow of poverty, and find myself with an income of twenty thousand pounds a year."

But wealth did not burden the monks forever. Wealth changes hands—that is one of its peculiarities.

Came wild war, red of tooth and claw. And the soldiery, who heretofore had been used only to protect the religious orders, now, flushed with victory, turned against them.

Easy to Listen Then.

Charges were trumped up against churchmen high in authority. The monasteries were looked upon as contraband of war. "To the victors belong the spoils" was the motto of a certain man who was President of the United States, so persistent was the war idea of acquiring wealth.

The property of the religious orders was confiscated, and as a reward for heroic services soldiers were given big tracts of land.

The great estates in Europe all have their origin in this well-established custom of dividing the spoils. The plan of taking the property of each or all who were guilty of sedition, contumacy and contravention was well established by precedents that traced back to Cain.

When George Washington appropriated the estate of Roger Morris, forty centuries of precedent looked down upon him.

Also it might be added that if a man owned a particularly valuable estate, it was easy for a soldier to listen to and believe the report that the owner had spoken ill of the king, and given succor to the enemy.

Then the soldier felt it his "duty" to punish the recalcitrant one by taking his property. That gave us The Age of the Barons.

The Reign of the Barons was merely a transfer of power with no revision of ideals. The choice between a miter and a helmet is nil and when the owner converses through his headgear, his logic is alike vulnerable and valueless.

The Past Is Dead.

Then The Age of the Barons has given away to The Age of the Merchants. The Merchants, whose business it is to carry things from where they are plentiful to where they are needed. But they did business by finesse and cleverness flavored with deception.

But the times have changed. Truth is now an asset, and a lie is a liability. Merchants to-day deal with their friends. Money is incidental to service.

Comes co-operation so quietly, and with so little ostentation that men do not realize the change.

"Lay hold on eternal life," said St. Paul, writing to Timothy. The proper translation we now know should have been, "Lay hold on the age to come."

All life is a preparation, just as all life is a sequence—a result.

The past is dead, the present is dying, and only that which is to come is alive.

Philanthropy once was palliation, just as the entire practice of medicine was palliation until day before yesterday.

Now we believe in equality of opportunity. We give men a chance—or we certainly should. And any man who has a job has a chance. The world needs capable people as never before. Also it is able and willing to pay them for it if they can render a service.

Garibaldi in London

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

GARIBALDI'S famous visit to England began April 1, 1863—and for the following twenty-four days the red-shirted old hero was given the time of his life. Never any foreigner, hardly any native hero, had ever been tendered such a magnificent reception.

The Duke of Sutherland's four-horse carriage, containing the Son of the Skipper of Nice, struggled for six long hours through five miles of London streets, between the starting point at the vessel on which Garibaldi arrived and Stafford House Square, near St. James Palace. A half million people had turned out to meet the man in the red shirt and gray blanket, and when the square was reached it seemed that all London was there to meet the liberator.

says an eyewitness, "Garibaldi stepped out of the carriage, as calm as in the day of battle, into a circle of fair ladies and great statesmen on the steps of Stafford House, while the Duke's carriage, in which he had come, literally fell to pieces in the stable, strained to breaking-point by the weight of the thousands of strong arms that had pulled at it and clung to it as it passed through a city gone mad with joy."

And it is well to remember, in spite of what has been said about the Duke of Sutherland and his carriage, the far more gentlemanly statesman, that the wonderful reception that Garibaldi met with was given to him by the plain people of England.

The working men of England were in the midst of the battle for enfranchisement. They were fighting King Privilege as hard as Garibaldi had been fighting the Bourbons, and now that the hero of Italy, the plain man of the people who had emancipated his country from the tyranny of the Bourbon rule, was actually in their midst they were delirious with joy.

It was an unexpected privilege to carry one of themselves in triumph through London streets, as if he had been a Caesar or a Wellington. It was the tribute of the democracy of England to the man who, with his good sword, had done so much for the democracy of Italy. It was humanity answering humanity, justice clapping hands with justice, the spirit of liberty in the British Isles shouting its mighty welcome to the lovers of liberty in the historic peninsula in the great Blue Sea.

Garibaldi gave England as much as he received from her. He won all hearts, those of the nobility, as well as those of the yeomanry. Tennyson, with whom he visited, and smoked, and recited Italian poetry, says of him: "What a noble human being! His manners have a certain divine simplicity in them, such as I have never witnessed in a native of these islands, among men at least, and they are gentler than those of most young men whom I know."

While on the Isle of Wight, Garibaldi planted a tree in Tennyson's garden, of which later on, the poet wrote as—

"the waving pine which here The warrior of Capraia set,
